Using DNA Testing to Identify Your Ancestor

by Don Raney (donraney@comcast.net) 972-278-3381

DNA (DeoxyriboNucleic Acid) is the blueprint of all life. It contains the codes that determine the individual characteristics for each person. For many years, forensic experts have used DNA testing to link suspects to crimes and to establish paternity. Now many DNA testing laboratories, including Family Tree DNA, Relative Genetics, DNA Heritage, Relative Genetics, GeneBase BioNet, DNA Consulting and Oxford Ancestors, are offering reasonable prices on DNA testing for a rapidly growing market of genealogists interested in proving a connection to an ancestral family.

DNA testing can be used to supplement knowledge gained from oral sources and historical documents to help solve your "brick wall" problems by identifying your paternal ancestral lineage. While the convergence of genetics and genealogy into a new science called "Genetic Genealogy" is still in the future, DNA testing by surname groups is already revealing valuable and challenging results.

To understand how DNA testing works, we will have to review some fundamentals of genetics. The human body contains about 100 trillion cells. The nucleus of every cell contains a copy of our DNA. All of our cells contain genes located in structures called chromosomes. Chromosomes come in pairs, one from your father and one from your mother. We all have 23 chromosome pairs. The information contained in each of the first 22 pairs of chromosomes is mixed so that we inherit characteristics from both parents.

The 23rd chromosome determines our sex. We inherit an X chromosome from our mother and we inherit either an X or Y chromosome from our father. If we inherit an X from our mother and an X from our father, our sex is female. If we inherit an X from our mother and a Y from our father, our sex is male. The Y chromosome is smaller than the X chromosome and its genetic material cannot mix with the X chromosome. Therefore, the Y chromosome of every living male is an exact copy of the Y chromosome of his father, grandfather, great grandfather etc.

Each male has a unique Y chromosome that is the same as all of his male ancestors. This unique feature can be used in DNA testing to identify all

PRESIDENT'S COLUMN

As you begin cleaning house and preparing your gardens for spring, think about doing the same for your genealogy and family history research. If you attended the January lock-in, have you filed all your research yet? Getting your genealogy papers organized where information can be found is just as rewarding as finding new information on your ancestor. Spring is a great time of year to do that filing.

Start by looking over books, materials, and photographs that you have acquired over the past winter. Do you have a location for everything? Are all the papers labeled with a citation, the date acquired, and a file number? If you have a large "To Be Filed" pile, stop and spend some time classifying and filing that material.

If you organize your materials now, you may find that you already have a book you need or have done research that you were planning on doing on your next Salt Lake City research trip. After organizing your work, take time to review everything you have on one person and write up the research tasks for that next trip. Spring-cleaning now can make that next research trip much more productive!

Spring-cleaning for genealogy includes more than books, copies, and photographs. What about spring-cleaning your computer, too? Are all your research analysis spreadsheets, images downloaded from the Internet, and report files organized into logical directories? Do you have a master research log that points to all your research on a specific family? Have you taken time recently to test all those Internet Bookmarks? Do they still work? Have you searched for your families on them recently, since content changes frequently? Are they sorted or categorized so that you can find them easily?

Spring-cleaning your genealogy should include reviewing your research for material that is ready to be published or contains "former" ancestors. If you have researched a line that later turned out to not be your ancestor, consider taking the research and posting it to a message board or donating it to a library near the ancestral home of that family for a vertical file. Go through your Magazines and Journals. If you're keeping magazines for just one article, consider scanning that article and donating the magazine to a library or family history center.

One final area for spring-cleaning is your computer system backup and recovery files. If you have saved years and years of backup files, maybe it's time to file, organize, and move offsite copies of those backup files. If you have not been backing up your genealogy research, start now! Remember it is not IF you are going to have a computer failure, it is WHEN you have the next hard drive failure or computer crash.

Spring-cleaning for genealogy involves some of the same steps that you would use with traditional spring-cleaning. Start with storing your winter's research instead of storing your winter clothes. Then organize and clean your computer and office in preparation for a new round of research by dusting off your piles of research, labeling everything, and filing it in a logical place. If getting started on your spring-cleaning seems overwhelming, start with 15-minute sessions every day. Little by little you, too, can have a spring-fresh start to your genealogy research.

Speaker: Brian Collins
Topic: Preserving Personal Papers

Brian Collins was born in Metairie, Louisiana, in 1977 and grew up in the state's capitol, Baton Rouge. He attended Louisiana State University beginning in 1996 and graduated with a Bachelor of Arts in print journalism in 2000. After working as a reporter for a weekly newspaper in Ascension Parish for several months, Brian enrolled in the graduate history program at L.S.U. and received his M.A. in 2002. While conducting research for his thesis, he became intrigued with the "stuff of history"—i.e., archives—and started to work on his Masters in Library & Information Science at L.S.U. Before graduating in December 2003, he finished a practicum of study at the Louisiana State Archives, learning preservation techniques, conducting preservation work, and preparing a finding guide for the John Gasquet photograph collection. In April 2004, he joined the staff of the Texas/Dallas History & Archives Division of the Dallas Public Library as an archivist.

The DGS 2006
Writing Competition

The Dallas Genealogical Society is pleased to open the competition for the 2006 DGS Writing Awards. This biennial event is sponsored to encourage genealogists to write, and to write well. The final stage of any genealogical project is to organize, evaluate, and document your research, and then record it so it may be shared with others. Family research, no matter how extensive, isn't complete without this important final step.

So, if you haven't already done so, now is the time to both take this final step and to share your work with your fellow genealogists. Who knows? You might take home the Winner's Award for your category at the December DGS Awards Banquet. This event is an excellent way to get your "ball-point" wet in the company of your friends and fellow writers. Everyone who writes is a winner, whether you enter the DGS Writing Awards or not, but you're more of a winner if you do.

And if you're an experienced writer and have "been here and done that?" Well, do it again! Enter your new baby in the writing challenge and see how it fares.

Any writing that fits the contest categories and has been completed between August 2004 and July 2006 is eligible for the event. There's still plenty of time even if you haven't started it yet, but don't hesitate. Don't be left out—pick up that piece you began with such enthusiasm last year and finish it!

As in past Writing Awards, there are four divisions of writings that you may enter. And good news for prolific writers: you may submit one entry in each Division. Details of these Divisions are in the DGS Writing Awards brochure.

This competition ranges from informal family stories and memories to fully annotated and indexed genealogical articles or compiled materials. There is a place for the beginning writer as well as the expert.

As far as beginners are concerned, don't be put off by the bibliography of "standards" in the brochure against which your writing will be judged. Genealogical writing must conform to certain levels of quality, and these are the normally accepted standards. For informal writing, it's mostly a matter of writing, spelling, and punctuating as you were taught in high school. But a small caveat here—things have changed a bit in the last several decades. What you learned in typing class, for example, may not be accepted practice anymore. A peek into The Chicago Manual of Style might be a good idea. Are you sure there're two spaces after a period? Check it out, and more, and spruce up your writing at the same time.

For the more esoteric Divisions, the indexing, numbering, and citation "rules" are more complex and may require some study. This could certainly be true if you've never done that level of writing before. But fear not—the Dallas Public Library has all the books listed in the bibliography if you need to upgrade your skills. And who doesn't? Use this as an opportunity to take a step forward in writing excellence as well as finishing your genealogical epic.

Don't let this "rules" stuff discourage you from writing. It's just a way of comparing your work to that of others in the genealogical world. And don't let the computer stuff bother you either. Don't have a computer? Use a typewriter or a pen. For the more informal divisions, that'll work, too. The writing itself is by far the most important thing. Anybody with a dictionary can check spelling, but only you can write your genealogical piece. Full speed ahead!

Carefully read the rules in the 2006 DGS Writing Awards brochure (available on the 8th floor of the Dallas Public Library, the DGS web site, and next month's newsletter), mail in your entry, and then you can tell your friends, "Oh, yes. I'm a writer." And you are!

Good luck!

Using DNA Testing to Identify Your Ancestor (continued)

by Don Raney

males with a common male ancestor. However, when the DNA within the male Y chromosome is copied from generation to generation, small mistakes or mutations are sometimes made in the DNA sequences. These mistakes result in differences between individual Y chromosomes called "polymorphisms." An individual's polymorphism identifies a set or "haplotype." All cousins will have the same haplotype and can be assigned to the same group.

The results of Y chromosome DNA testing are usually in the form of 12, 25 or 37 numeric values for each person. These values are compared for individuals in order to place them in a group. Matching DNA test results indicate a very high probability of a common male ancestor. The Y chromosome DNA test can place individuals in a group of men who share a common ancestor. The DNA test can also determine if a group of men with the same surname are directly related through a common ancestor.

Generally, what is measured in Y chromosome testing is a series of markers, called short tandem repeats, situated along the length of the chromosome. This DNA is essentially "junk DNA" in that it serves no known purpose, but is very useful for detecting similarities and differences between males. Basically, the scores at all markers should be identical between a father and his biological son; and between individuals who are descended from a common ancestor within the last thousand years.

For example, if you submit a sample for DNA testing and you find that you match exactly with another person on a 25 marker test, how many generations are you removed from the MRCA (Most Recent Common Ancestor)? The answer to this question must be based on a statistical analysis of the evidence which is still being accumulated. However, the current estimate is that there is a 50% probability that the MRCA is within 7 generations (175 years). In addition, there is a 90% probability that the MRCA is within 20 generations (500 years).

In some cases, DNA testing can provide bad news. Some participants will discover that they are not a descendant of the person that they have speculated to be their ancestor. This could mean that they are a descendant of an unrelated family with the same surname or that there has been a "non-paternity" event in their male ancestry. For a paternal ancestral line traced back for 12 generations about 15 percent of the males will possess the founder's surname but someone else's DNA. There are six possible reasons for a break in a DNA signature that can occur at any location in the paternal line of descent.

- A male child was fathered illegitimately.
- A male child has retained his mother's surname.
- A husband has adopted his wife's surname.
- A male child has adopted his step-father's or maternal grandfather's surname.
- A family adopts a male child who takes the father's surname.
- Aliases or other intentional name changes.

Now that you understand the Y chromosome DNA test, how can you use it in your genealogical research? A single DNA test is meaningless unless the results can be compared to DNA tests submitted by other persons researching the same surname. The most practical use for DNA test results is for surname groups who have pooled their genealogical information in an effort to determine how the various members of the group are related. DNA testing by surname organizations can be a productive means to classify members into related groups and persons who are unrelated to the other groups.

Family Tree DNA currently is sponsoring over 2900 DNA Surname Projects. Search at: www.familytreedna.com/surname.asp to see if your surname is listed among current projects. If your surname is not on the list of DNA Projects, you can organize a new Family Tree DNA surname project with a minimum of six participants or join the DGS Family Tree DNA Project to receive the discounted group rate for your DNA tests. Family Tree DNA has produced a video that describes DNA testing and the results that have been observed by several existing surname DNA projects. To see this video, go to: www.familytreedna.com/videoaudio.html.

If you find an active Family Tree Y-DNA project with your surname, you can join the project on the Internet at the discounted rate by submitting $99 for a 12 Marker Test, $169 for a 25 Marker Test or $219 for a 37 Marker Test. The results of your DNA test will be returned to you in about six weeks and a copy will be sent to the DNA Surname Group Administrator. The Group Administrator will have a Home Page for your DNA Surname Project with tables to compare the results of the DNA tests. The results will be divided into Family Groups who descended from a common ancestor.

When you receive your Y-DNA results, you can compare your results with others in your Surname Project. If your Y-DNA test results match another person, you share a common male ancestor at some point in your past. You can request an e-mail contact to communicate with willing participants. Your DNA testing company will continually monitor all test results and e-mail you of any new Y-DNA matches in your project.

You can also enter your Y-DNA test results in several public access databases to find additional matches. YBASE (www.ybase.org), sponsored by DNA Heritage, and SMGF (Sorenson Molecular Genealogy Foundation at: <http://smgf.org>) are open to the public. You can enter your Y-DNA results in both to search for matches in their worldwide databases.

The Dallas Genealogical Society has recently formed a DNA Interest Group to assist DGS members in utilizing DNA testing and test results in their genealogical research. The first meeting of the DNA Interest Group has been scheduled for Tuesday, June 6, 2006. The meeting has been scheduled to start at 4:30 pm in the Main Floor Auditorium of the J. Erik Jonsson Dallas Public Library, ahead of the DGS Computer Interest Group meeting at 6:30 pm.

Future meetings are proposed to be scheduled at the same time on the first Tuesday of March, June, September and December. The June 6, 2006 meeting will include a program "Using DNA Testing To Identify Your Ancestor" presented by Don Raney. The program will be followed by an extended question and answer session and a discussion about what results have been experienced by various participants with DNA Testing.

If you are interested in the DNA Interest Group and would like to receive an e-mail reminder before each meeting, go to www.dallasgenealogy.org and click on Special Interest Groups then click on DNA Interest Group and click on HERE to send an e-mail that will add you the mailing list for the DNA Interest Group.

BLEEPS and SQUOOGLES (à la R2D2)

That vertical steel barrier between the steering wheel and the engine compartment of your favorite sedan du jour is called a "firewall." By the miracle of hip-hop linguistics in a confused—and confusing—world, a similar protective barrier exists between the computerized you and the cybernetic chaos of the Internet. As luck would have it, it too is called a firewall, and there are two kinds.

Jim Rossman is the desktop computer manager of the Dallas Morning News and one of the unheralded (until now) benefits of Saturday mornings throughout the year is catching his always-timely articles in the Business Section under the heading Tech Weekend.

The article of March 11, 2006 expounds in simple terms [that even I can understand] the workings of software firewalls that work on an individual computer and hardware firewalls that serve to protect a network of two or more connected computers. Just in case you've already trashed that edition of the paper—and you know who you are—you can find some semblance of literary salvation at the following URL (also compliments of Mr. Rossman): www.fags.org/fags/firewalls-faq.

By the way, that same March 11 article included some timely information for those of you interested in sharpening digital photographs. Apparently, Mr. Rossman also speaks the language of amount, radius and threshold fluently. If you don't believe me see: www.tastystock.com/articles/unsharp\_mas\_k.php. May the Force be with you.

The DPL Genealogy Section Duplicate Book Inventory Project

Shirley Sloat

During last year's 100,000 Book Challenge, Lloyd Bockstruck mentioned that in the back storage area of the 8th floor was a collection of books that perhaps could be candidates for trading with various libraries and genealogical and historical societies. These books were unneeded duplicates of those already on the 8th floor shelves of the Genealogy Section.

In September, the Board approved a project creating an inventory of these duplicate books, with the idea that, although the list wasn't likely to be available during the course of the 100,000 book project, it could be used by the library staff during coming years to continue increasing the book count without spending actual dollars. An additional benefit would be that every book traded to another entity would free up a bit of backroom shelf space.

A project team composed of Shirley Sloat, Alice Jones, Alan and Betty Miller, Ed Millis, Mary Frances Stevens, Marge Stockton, Liz Thurmond, and Ann Williams inventoried the books on 20 shelves, documenting the title, author, publication date and publisher, whether hard or soft binding, and the page count. Each book was also assigned to a 'category' such as family, lineage, heraldry or locality. The inventory data was entered into an Excel database which will be maintained by library staffers. The final count was approximately 750 volumes that are candidates for trading with other entities.

The books have been arranged by category and title and are now ready for the library staff's use. We hope that our Genealogy Section will benefit by the addition of some new publications, and our unneeded ones will be welcomed into other collections.

Any library or genealogical organization that wishes to investigate trades should contact Lloyd Bockstruck either by phone (214-670-1406) or by email (ldbockstruck@dallaslibrary.org).

Gladys Paulin Highlights Immigrant Records

On March 4th, Gladys Paulin mentioned several sources of Irish Immigrant Records. One of those was the Emigrant Savings Bank Records. Lloyd Bockstruck has purchased these records for Dallas Library on microfilm from the New York Public Library. The Dallas Public Library also owns a book about those records, Irish Immigrants of the Emigrant Industrial Savings Bank by Kevin J. Rich.

After returning home, Gladys sent an email wanting the Dallas audience to know that there is a finding aid for these records from the New York Public Library online as a .pdf file: www.nypl.org/research/chss/spe/rbk/faids/emigrant.pdf. This source was not mentioned in the Bibliography for her lecture. Also online is an index to some of these records at Ancestry.com as the New York Emigrant Savings Bank, 1850-1883 database.

Emigrant Industrial Savings Bank provided services for New York City's primarily Catholic Irish immigrant population. The accounts were held for relatively short intervals, and for each person, the numbers of deposits and withdrawals are small. There are several different types of records available in this collection. When a new deposit-account was opened, it was entered in the Index Book, the Test Book, and Deposit-Account Ledger.

For genealogical research, the Signature and Test Books are invaluable. These were used to confirm someone's identification for withdrawal of money. As an example, one entry for a common Irish name, John Fitzgerald, yielded the following information from his Signature and Test book entry:

John Fitzgerald, 79 James St., Shoemaker, born 1808, from Rathcormack, Cork, Ireland, entered the US in 1836 on Jane of Glasgow, married to Margaret Delahunty, 2 children: James and Richard.

What researcher would not want to find this information on their immigrant ancestor! For further resources on immigration and naturalization records, DGS has a few of the handouts from Gladys Paulin's lecture; they will be available for sale at the sales desk at the next General Meeting.

FROM OUR READERS:

Dick Eastman had a notice in his blog about Family Bibles being auctioned off on eBay.com. I checked it out and found there are about 2500 bibles and related texts listed under Family Bible or Antique Bible. At least some of them have family records in them, like the Noble Family bible which starts with a death recorded in 1742. What treasures! A suggestion was made that people keep an eye on this site for Family Bibles that need to be rescued. Some of them are going for less than $1 to people who are just collecting them for their covers.

Balch Springs History Project

A committee of the Balch Springs Chamber of Commerce is working on a special project depicting the history of the Dallas County town of Balch Springs. Historical information from 1845 forward is needed. The committee especially seeks the loan of photos or small artifacts. Please send any information to mkosank1@txued.com or call Marilyn Kosanke at 972-216-8912.

WE ARE THE CHOSEN

In each family, there is one who seems called to find the ancestors. To put flesh on their bones and make them live again, to tell the family story and to feel that somehow they know and approve. Doing genealogy is not a cold gathering of facts but, instead, breathing life into all who have gone before.

We are the storytellers of the tribe. All tribes have one. We have been called, as it were, by our genes. Those who have gone before cry out to us, "Tell our story!" So, we do. In finding them, we somehow find ourselves. How many graves have I stood before now and cried? I have lost count. How many times have I told the ancestors, "You have a wonderful family; you would be proud of us." How many times have I walked up to a grave and felt somehow there was love there for me? I cannot say. It goes beyond just documenting facts. It goes to who am I and why do I do the things I do. It goes to seeing a cemetery about to be lost forever to weeds and indifference and saying, "I can't let this happen." The bones here are bones of my bone and flesh of my flesh. It goes to doing something about it. It goes to pride in what our ancestors were able to accomplish, how they contributed to what we are today. It goes to respecting their hardships and losses, their never giving in or giving up, their resoluteness to go on and build a life for their family. It goes to deep pride that the fathers fought and some died to make and keep us a Nation. It goes to a deep and immense understanding that they were doing it for us. It is of equal pride and love that our mothers struggled to give us birth. Without them, we could not exist, and so we love each one, as far back as we can reach. That we might be born who we are. That we might remember them. So, we do. With love and caring and scribing each fact of their existence, because we are they and they are the sum of who we are. So, as a scribe called, I tell the story of my family. It is up to that one called in the next generation to answer the call and take my place in the long line of family storytellers. That is why I do my family genealogy, and that is what calls those young and old to step up and restore the memory or greet those whom we had never known before.
