DALLAS GENEALOGICAL SOCIETY

WE DID IT! 100,000 BOOK GOAL REACHED!

Have you heard? The Dallas Genealogical Society's 50th Anniversary Book Challenge has been met as of January 12th, 2006! Here is a history of the project by Shirley Sloat, 2005 DGS President, who envisioned and shepherded this wonderful project to its successful conclusion:

Before the decision was made to adopt the 100,000 Book Challenge as our 50th DGS Anniversary project, we looked at the original 1955 charter of the Society. One of its stated purposes was "to collect and preserve information relating to those pioneers who settled Dallas County and to the early history of this city and county."

Throughout the years, the Dallas Public Library genealogical collection has been built not only to collect and preserve Dallas-area records but to make available "the published records of other states, whence come the Texas pioneers." For those researching family history in the southern states, Virginia, and New England, DPL genealogy resources were remarkable. However, we realized that we had far to go in order to provide a full range of material for the many other geographic locations that represent the origins of the diverse Dallas population in 2005.

Lloyd Bockstruck wrote an article for the Dallas Morning News explaining that we were seeking not only monetary contributions but actual books from the public—books from any location and any time period that might provide clues to help a researcher place an ancestor at a particular place and time. The types of books desired included alumnae lists from schools, membership lists of churches, clubs, social and political and professional organizations, town and county histories and directories, as well as family histories.

The Book Challenge Project team, made up of Shirley Sloat, Marti Fox, Shirley Hawn, Glenn Kinkade, and Happi McQuirk, developed publicity plans and contacts and various library staffers helped to create publicity posters, a colorful progress chart, and special bookplates for books acquired as part of this 50th anniversary project. As I announced at the general meeting on January 23rd, we have achieved the 100,000 book goal! It was an aggressive goal for DGS in our 50th year, but the board and membership worked diligently to achieve Lloyd Bockstruck and Shirley Sloat's vision. Shirley hosted a thank-you party for the cataloging workers and 8th floor staff on January 23rd. The DPL employees all seemed to enjoy the break and the recognition by the society.

By the time you receive this Newsletter, we will have enjoyed Karen Clifford's lecture. I hope that the methodology and Internet search topics help you break through one of your research brick walls. Do join us for Gladys Paulin, CG on March 4th or at the Institute this summer!

If you are not able to pre-register by mail for any DGS event, you may attend if there is room for "walk-ins". Should you decide within 10 days of the lecture, then send email to lectures@dallas genealogy.org or call the library Genealogy Section (214-670-1433). An advantage to pre-registering is you have the option to order a hot lunch and pick up your syllabus in the 'fast' line.

As we look forward, this year is a building block to the future of Dallas Genealogical Society. We have a nice solid base to the organization's yearly plan. The board has planned great educational programs and we have a solid financial base even with an aggressive donation schedule this year. We also produce an outstanding journal with Dallas County records. John Wylie is starting to work on formulating the organization and procedures for creating and running Special Interest Groups of the Society. DGS was able to pull together and achieve an ambitious goal last year in increasing the books to 100K. Just where do we go from here?

So that we don't get so preoccupied with immediate issues or lose sight of the objectives of the organization, a strategic plan is desirable. Having a strategic plan may not be a guaranteed recipe for success, but without it we might not be able to achieve as much as a society. Genealogy and Family History research is fun. How do we get more people passionate about this avocation and better serve our members? If you want to help in strategic planning, please drop me an email at president@dallasgenealogy.org.

Volunteers make this organization succeed! We can always use more volunteers helping with seminars, assisting patrons on the 8th floor of the Dallas Public Library, serving refreshments at our meetings, or even doing data entry or editing a syllabus. If you have a skill to share, send email to volunteer@dallasgenealogy.org. (See Top Ten Reasons for Volunteering on page 26).

TOP TEN REASON FOR VOLUNTEERING

Why volunteer for DGS? Here are the top ten reasons Jeri Steele has for volunteering:

10. IT SAVES THE LIBRARY RESOURCES: Volunteers provide valuable community service that allows DPL to stay open for genealogy research.

9. IT STRENGTHENS THE GENEALOGY COM-MUNITY: You help foster interest in and use of the genealogy section of DPL.

8. YOU LEARN A LOT: By helping others with the genealogy research, you can deepen your skills and knowledge.

7. IT'S A CHANCE TO GIVE BACK: Others helped you to get started, so repay the universe by helping someone else in their research.

6. SHARE YOUR SKILLS WITH OTHERS: A task done by an experienced volunteer might take 30 minutes to one hour a week. Share your expertise in planning, accounting, management, team building, word processing, Adobe Acrobat software, entertaining, or teaching. You never know what skill we can use next!

5. YOU CAN LEARN SOMETHING NEW: Fellow volunteers can be used as references on a resume, can help you on your problem genealogical research, or teach you a new skill.

4. DGS MIGHT GET $ FOR YOUR EFFORTS: For example, Exxon-Mobil has a foundation that will donate $500 for retirees that volunteer over 50 hours in a quarter. You volunteer and we make the application together.

3. BECAUSE YOU HAVE A PASSION: Genealogy is so fun that you want everyone you meet to enjoy it too!

2. YOU MEET NEW PEOPLE: I never met a genealogy "stranger," just a friend I never knew yet. Just start talking about your own genealogical research or ask them about theirs.

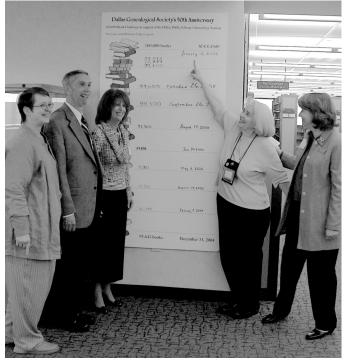

1. YOU CAN MAKE A DIFFERENCE: Because volunteering makes a difference to the Dallas Genealogical Society and to the Dallas Public Library.

workers ramped up to deal with the increased effort necessary to implement book acquisitions, coming through as heroes as their annual workload doubled.

DGS members and others in the community took the opportunity to clean out their bookshelves, donating items that will continue to be available to them from the library but now include a bookplate showing their name as "donor." Various special discounts were offered to some of us who haunted estate and garage sales and bookshops as we traveled about the state and country. One local dealer knew exactly what we wanted and handed us free books on a monthly basis to support what he agreed was our good cause. Several corporations made either outright or matching fund donations to the challenge. The project was and is a success, with the 100,000 goal reached on January 12. The numbers will continue to increase as books in the acquisition and cataloging "pipeline" are fully processed. The count on February 1 was 100,300, with more to come!

The beauty of the project is that we have received an unexpectedly high number of books from private collections—often books that are no longer (or perhaps never were) available through public channels. They apply to an amazing number of localities spread across the United States and outside its borders. Our genealogy collection, already excellent, is now even richer with research materials for our diverse Dallas population.

SHIPS AND THINGS

by Shirley Stertz Hawn

Have you ever tried to imagine what it was like crammed in a boat with only a few possessions, hopefully with some of your family, and all of your dreams, trying to stay optimistic about leaving everything you've known, everyone you've known, heading to the big abyss ... the abyss of the unknown?

Well, it's possible that's why we're here today. Someone, or many someones, did just that. They had a dream, a dream of a better life, and the courage to pursue their dream.

I said, "it's possible," because we all know there are many circumstances that brought our ancestors to the shores of North America. Some came on the King's business, and others, whether adventure or escape was the motive, courage and endurance was the necessary ingredient for surviving.

We have read history books, been to lectures, and listened to our grandparents regale us with tales of the past. However, none of that prepared me for learning the conditions of my immigrant ancestor's journey of hope to a new life.

Most of the early ships carrying immigrants were bug infested. One had a shipboard newspaper called the Cockroach. Water was rationed, often becoming undrinkable, and passengers were forced to catch rainwater.

They often had more water than they wanted. The steerage areas were frequently flooded when waves broke over the ship; their belongings and beds were continually wet.

There were two classes of passengers on these early vessels: cabin and steerage. Although there was an adequate amount of food, it was a better quality in the cabins.

On very early voyages, emigrants cooked their own food. Some vessels carried live pigs, sheep and poultry for their cabin passengers while those in steerage ate salted meat. Although it was often a different menu and eaten separately, by 1855, most meals were prepared in a central kitchen.

Steerage living space was divided into three parts. Single women traveled in the rear of the ship, married couples in the middle, and single men in the forward section.

Sickness and disease were part of the journey. Children were the most susceptible to the poor food and living conditions: one in five under the age of five didn't survive the voyage.

Cleanliness on the long voyages was more difficult for women than men. Since fresh water was at a premium, it wasn't available for bathing. Men could go on deck and be hosed down by the crew, but decorum denied female passengers the same opportunity. The hospital facilities were far from adequate and shipboard doctors were frequently ill-trained and too fond of alcohol. Actually, "spirits" were often the medicine of choice on these early voyages and a large number of stomach ailments in the evening seemed to be cured by gin.

The close confinement of the long voyages often led to arguments and dissatisfaction among the passengers. The monotony was occasionally relieved by sightings of flying fish, whales, and dolphins. Passing ships always created excitement. They usually stopped and small boats went back and forth carrying letters to be mailed home.

The opening of the Suez Canal in 1869 and the Panama Canal in 1914 made the journey for those going to New Zealand and Australia considerably shorter.

With the advent of the steamship, the trips became less difficult. Since these were often mail carriers with many stops, the crossings weren't necessarily shorter but easier to endure.

There are many Internet sites that provide shipping records, passenger records, and catalog/periodical databases. Remember, many of our ancestors from central and parts of Eastern Europe came through Hamburg and Bremen, not just the German émigré.

When I used Google and typed, immigrant ships to United States in the address field, I got over two million hits. Below are a few I checked and know are still viable:

Raksha Parikh Honored

Shirley Sloat (right) presented Raksha Parikh with a plaque from DGS honoring her contribution to the 100,000 Book Challenge.

As you know, the Dallas Genealogical Society celebrated its 50th anniversary during 2005 with the 100,000 Book Challenge – a project to increase the number of books in the Genealogy Section of the Dallas Public Library from 95,641 volumes at the beginning of the year to 100,000 volumes by the end of 2005.

The acquisition process can stretch out over a long time period, since it may include ordering, receiving, cataloging, binding, and updating the card catalog before a book is available on the shelves for use by the public. Our agreed-upon project procedure was that we would increase the book count only when cataloging is complete.

The Society and the public have contributed both money and books to this campaign and we are delighted to announce that our goal has been achieved. Accomplishment of all the book acquisition and processing tasks has involved many, many library employees—some of whom we rarely see because they are down on L1—and others with whom we interact more frequently because they are on the 8th floor where we DGS members spend our time. Whether we see them or not, we appreciate the work of every one of them.

One Dallas Public Library employee has been identified as an outstanding contributor toward accomplishing our 100,000 book goal.

Raksha Parikh, a member of the Materials Processing group, has done an outstanding job of quickly cataloging materials for the Genealogy Section. She catalogs or edits many more titles a month than is her goal, most of these being genealogy materials. She has become so proficient that the cataloger who is training her allows her to edit records for reprints and to input original cataloging which no other staff in her grade level has ever been capable of or allowed to do. Month after month her accuracy rate is 100%, so not only does she do a tremendous amount of work but also it is exceptionally accurate. When she receives a volume in a set, she adds the title of the new volume to the contents note on the cataloging record.

As a result, patrons are able to search the library catalog by the title of the volume and find the record. This takes time. Most of the author, compiler or editor names on genealogy materials do not have name authority established. (Name authority establishes a unique name form for each author, compiler, etc. or chooses a single name form when an author writes under more than one name, so that all books, music, etc. written by the person can be found by searching using that one name form.) While Raksha doesn't set up the name authorities, she must search several places first to determine that the name authority hasn't already been established and that, too, takes time.

The Society would like to commend and thank Raksha Parikh for the diligence and proficiency that helped us achieve our 50th anniversary project goal. – Jeri Steele Ancestry.com Celebrates Black History Month by Providing FREE Access to Historical Records Detailing the Lives of Hundreds of Thousands of African-Americans

PROVO, Utah, Feb. 1 /PRNewswire/—For African Americans, tracking down ancestors can present a unique set of challenges—few other groups face as many obstacles when it comes to family history research. Often, a lack of credible documentation can make the journey both difficult and time-consuming.

Fortunately, there is a vast collection of data available online. In celebration of Black History Month, Ancestry.com, which hosts the largest online collection of family history records, has launched an all-new African American Research Center at www.ancestry.com/aahistory. Throughout the month of February, Ancestry.com will be offering free access to this vast collection of historical records detailing the lives of hundreds of thousands of African Americans.

"Public records, personal narratives, legal documents, and letters—evidence of the past, left behind by those who lived it—can be extremely valuable tools for understanding the lives, legacies, and stories of our ancestors and the worlds in which they lived," said Tim Sullivan, president and CEO of MyFamily.com, Inc., which operates Ancestry.com. "By making this information easily accessible, Ancestry.com is making it easier for the people to uncover and share the personal stories that make up their family history and heritage."

Some of the records available include:

- Freedman's Bank Records, 1865-1874.
- Slave Schedules, 1850 & 1860.
- U.S. Federal Census, 1870.
- Civil War Service Records.
- Afro-Louisiana History and Genealogy, 1718-1820.
