NEWS FROM THE BOARD

It is hard to realize but another year has passed and it is time to renew your membership. We have had a very good year with the highest membership in our history. Naturally, we hope for 100% renewals and a lot of new members. Our members have been wonderful this past year, bringing in many new members. Your friends are always welcome at the meetings. Remember, membership brings you four Quarterly magazines, eight regular meetings, and the May Workshop, as well as the friendship of other genealogists. Send your $6.00 dues for 1972 to Mrs. B. J. Campbell, 2033 Oates, Apt. #207, Dallas, Texas 75228.

We hope all of you have been called and reminded of our meetings. In place of our expensive postcards, the Society has set up a telephone committee of a number of hard-working and dedicated members, headed by Mrs. A. W. Gardman. You are on someone's list and will be called to have your reservation taken for the luncheon meetings and to be reminded of the evening meetings. We had large turnouts for the September and October meetings, so feel that the system is working well. There is always the possibility that you may be missed once in a while, for you might not be home and co-incidentally miss three or four calls. However, we will do our best and if you haven't been called for any of the fall meetings, call Mrs. Gardman, 369-0546, and check with her.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 27th, DOWNTOWN YMCA AT NOON. LUNCH.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 24th, 7:30 P.M. OAK CLIFF SAVINGS AND LOAN BLDG. IN PRESTON CENTER.

THURSDAY, MARCH 23rd. DOWNTOWN YMCA AT NOON. LUNCH.

ALL PROGRAMS TO BE ANNOUNCED.

By the time this issue reaches you, the Society will have elected some new officers and a Board Member at the November meeting. It may not be generally realized that the By-Laws set a limit to the time a person may serve on the Board of the Society. Excepting those who are to be elected President or Executive Vice-President, all persons, on serving three years, must retire and may not be re-elected until they have been off the Board two years. This makes it possible for new persons to come on the Board, bringing new ideas, new enthusiasm and new energy. The Society is very grateful to those who have served on the Board and who now hopefully retire to do some well deserved genealogy.

We do not know the new Officers and Board Member at this time, but we can say thank you, alphabetically, to those departing: Mrs. Duane C. Cleere (Doris), who has brought our membership to an all-time high; Mrs. A. R. Lush (Jeanne), who has served as a Director at Large, has been one of the teachers of the El Centro course, and initiated and carried through the regional genealogical societies meeting in July; Mrs. J. R. Macdonald (Peg), who has served as Program Chairman for two years and Editor for the past year; and Mrs. Jack A. Morris, Jr. (Mildred), who has been in charge of taking luncheon reservation and letting you know about the meeting. Thank you all.

We also thank the Nominating Committee who will present the slate of new Officers and a Director at the November meeting: Mr. H. W. Anderson, Miss Ruth Cooper, Mrs. James W. Cullar, Mrs. Harold C. McCrary and Mrs. J. R. Macdonald.

BOOKS: THE PAST REGAINED

In this country, we have made a tradition of mocking tradition, which is to say that we have been uneasy about it and have come to terms with it disingenuously, if at all. They order this matter better in France, and, indeed, everywhere in Europe. Over there, to be curious about one's antecedents is not necessarily a form of self-aggrandizement; the family tree can be frolicked in, squirrel-fashion, or even dozed in and hung from, possum-fashion, without one's appearing to have embraced the exquisite folly of ancestor worship. Genealogy is held to be an interesting branch of knowledge and not simply a snobbish one. Moreover, to the extent that it opens innumerable doors upon the past, genealogy invites one to roam at will through a landscape that, as it grows every day more familiar and bizarre, gives bolder and bolder hints of who it is one has it in him to become; uncannily, one begins to take energy and direction from what had seemed at first but a great necropolis, stretching from horizon to horizon. Astonishing how pungent it is and how well pleased one is to breathe it, the dust of one's dead! European writers have always known how to savor this cannibal fragrance. One thinks of Yeats, who from earliest youth doted upon his ancestors and gathered courage and inspiration from them. Figuratively as well as literally, they were the making of him, and he never tired of celebrating in verse the manliness of what he called the "old fathers" and their notable estrangement from the marketplace. Country parsons, scholars, hunting and fishing masters of obscure demesnes in the green fastness of Ireland, they mattered not so much as a pinch in the scales of history, but their scion saw them as heroic: gentry wedded to the land and yet totally unlike the blunted peasant, locked in exhausting intercourse with it, or the meagre, moneymaking men in towns, ravishers of it at second and third hand. If to our eye Yeats is a far braver figure than his forebears, this may be because he looked back over his shoulder toward all those mingled Pollexfens, Middletons, and Butlers, and, striving to equal them, exceeded them. It was no mere literary conceit when, at the age of forty-eight, he apologized to their ghosts for having failed to beget more than books; it happened that he was ready to become an ancestor before he was ready to become a father, and in good time (for one of the things the past teaches is that there is nearly always time enough to do whatever we really want to do) he became both.

American writers have tended to reflect our national skepticism of pedigrees. Even an Adams, speaking of his distinguished lineage, manages to strike a note of sourness, and it is by an irony equally sour that the childless Washington is hailed as the father of his country. As for the rest of us, we may hesitate to ferret out family archives only in part because we fear to be thought to be putting on airs; we also fear, and with reason, that what we uncover in the course of our researches will prove to be of a spiritual and intellectual poverty so dire that we will hasten to tie up and put away the brittle pages, to let fall the heavy lid of the trunkful of sought-for souvenirs. For what have our writers of poetry and fiction wigwagged to us over the heads of their contemporaries but that the American past has been often an intolerable burden to totter under, not because there was so much of it but because there was so little, and that little so harsh, so thin, so mean, so un nourishing? No use looking back, they seem to say, except in revulsion. The family is what cannot feed you and yet will not let you go; to escape it is to make good. The authentic American voice has always been that of Frost's Yankee farmer saying, "Home is the place where, when you have to go there, they have to take you in." And there have been few to protest, along with the farmer's wife, "I should have called it something you somehow haven't to deserve." Only a hired man would come home to die; a proper man would die in a ditch, alone.

But now, as late in our history as 1971, something extraordinary has happened-- a book has been written, perhaps the first of its kind, in which all our received ideas about tradition and the past and the family are quietly, charmingly, and with an unchallengeable self-confidence turned upside down and inside out and made to look very strange and yet very appealing in their new postures and skins. This pioneering book is by the novelist William Maxwell, and it is his first work of nonfiction. With perfect accuracy and with a no less perfect equanimity, he calls it "Ancestors" (Knopf). It is worth pausing to note that in Bowker's latest edition of Books in Print there is but one work that bears this title, and it is, as one might surmise, not by an American but by an Englishman. As if unaware that he is taking terrible chances with the expectations of readers brought up on the parched and lonely contrarities of Dickinson, Jewett, Masters, Lewis, Anderson, and the like, Mr. Maxwell rummages about among two or three centuries of parents, grandparents, great-grandparents, and great-great-grandparents, and finds himself at peace with them and with his admiration for them. He writes about them at once truly and tenderly, though there is often little enough that is tender about them; the Maxwells were of Scottish Presbyterian descent, and even when they are sanguine such folk are dour. Having been born into this world to assist God by demonstrating His wisdom in choosing them, they owed it to Him to work and pray and beget and live as long as possible and then die, on their deathbeds perhaps still fiercely disputing the merits of infant baptism; earth was no laughing matter, and neither was Eternity.

The accuracy of the title of "Ancestors" is not diminished if one points out that the author could almost as easily have called his book "Me Among Mine." For, with the much admired mischievous sleight of hand of his novles (in which it is nothing for him to saw people neatly in two and cause potted lilies to leap from a furled silk handkerchief), Mr. Maxwell has contrived to outwit the difficulty that most autobiographers face when they pretend to have been thrust against their will onto the stage at the very moment that they are making a leg at the audience. Not for him a tiresome display of false modesty; what is he writing his book for except to render himself visible? and knowable? he assumes his place in the spotlight as a matter of course, and with the audacious suavity of an expert magician continuously directs our attention elsewhere. Elsewhere is not, we may be sure, where the important action is to be looked for, and if we are diligent and alert what we are told about past Maxwells won't be a patch on what we deduce about the present one. How easy he makes his feats of autobiographical prestidigitation seem! Observe how, amused and unself-conscious, he begins one chapter at stage center: "I have always liked my name. This may be because of the people I was surrounded with as a child. When they used my name, or my brother's, or for that matter one another's, it was almost always with affection, which somehow rubbed off on the name itself." Or, seeming to march briskly offstage in order to leave it available to his father: "I'm sure they didn't ride in a sleeping car--it would have cost too much. And that they brought something to stay their hunger: thick meat sandwiches, Pickles. Pie. And cake. And that my father had a great deal to say, for he was the youngest and it was the first time in his life that he had enjoyed his father's undivided attention all through a day and a night." Or, finally, as if from the wings, himself nearly obliterated: "Robert Maxwell and Mary Edie had fifteen children, of whom my great-grandfather, also named Robert, was the eleventh. They were all born between 1794 and 1818, which means that for twenty-five years there was always a baby in the house." How does the magician persuade us to follow with pleasure the complex interweavings of those long-loosened lives? What is the trick by which he holds us fast? Ah, yes! " . . . there was always a baby in the house." The magician is not as far offstage as we had supposed.

The author's most successful feat of deception is this: that a certain, scarcely detectable point in his narrative the ancestors of "Ancestors: are made to slip away and we are left in the presence of a little boy who, all nakedly and touchingly, is about to lose his beloved mother by death, who is to suffer the ignominy of adolescence in a desolate household, and who is to spend years learning that the contest of love and suspicion between father and son can never be won by either and is not to be ended even after death. "It is not true that the dead desert the living. They go away for a very short time, and then they come back and stay as long as they are needed. But sooner or later a time comes when they are in the way; their presence is, for one reason or another, an embarrassment; there is no place for them in the lives of those they once meant everything to. Then they go away for good." That passage concerns the author's mother; the last glimpse we are given of the father before he dies, at eighty, implies that the author is not -- at least, not yet -- ready to make the passage concern the father as well:

When I was in my forties, and married and living in Westchester County, my father and my stepmother came for a visit. It was October, and cool enough for a fire in the fireplace. Before dinner I made a round of drinks, and my father and I sat on either side of the fire, talking with our glasses on the floor beside us, and suddenly a suspicion crossed my mind, for the first time. I don't know why it took me so long to ask this question or why it never occurred to my father to tell me without my having to ask. I picked up the poker and rearranged the logs and then, leaning back, said, "Am I like your father?" and he said, rather crossly, "Of course."

We are all more or less uneasily descendants, and we are all imminently ancestral. In the enemy country between those states stands the family tree. Mr. Maxwell has made the startling discovery that it is worth taking shelter in. We are lucky to have been allowed to join him under all those folded leaves.

EARLY MARRIAGE RECORDS, DALLAS COUNTY, TEXAS
MARRIAGE BOOK C, PART VII

There are two different reasons in these Early Marriage Records for having two spellings of certain names. One of course is difficulty in reading rather poor handwriting. However, the reader must wonder when confronted by Alonzo J. Taylor or John A. Taylor. The names of the bride and groom appear twice in the Record Book, once when they apply for a liscence, once when the minister makes his return. In some case, the name is given differently and we have no way of knowing which is correct. The first is that given at the time of taking out the liscence and there might be some reason to think it more likely to be correct than the minister making the returns, often some time after the wedding.

J.P.=Justive of the Peace; M.G.=Minister of the Gospel; O.M.=Ordained Minister; O.M.G.=Ordained Minister of the Gospel; C.C. or C. Church=Christian Church; R.B.=Regualr Baptist; U.B.=United Bretheren; M.E. Church, South=Methodist Episcopal Church, South=the Methodist Church, The Episcopal Church was a separate Church and usually listed as Epis. Sometimes there are no initials after the man who married a couple, yet in another place he may be listed as a J.P. or O.M. In that particular liscence, the initials were just left off.

THE ANDERSONS, DALLAS COUNTY PIONEERS

by Jerry M. Flook, 1018 Centerville Rd., Garland, Texas 75040

Camp Allen, Louisiana
December 16, 1864

Mrs. Rebeca Barnes,

Dear Wife, I am pleasantly seated for the purpose of addressing you a few lines. It is true that I wrote to you only a few days since and have not received an answer but I will have a favorable opportunity of sending this by the kind hand of Mr. Cornwell and I am quite sure you will get this promptly.

I can inform you that your husband is alive and well but alas I cannot pen the same glad and consoling tidings for Mrs. Anderson. Her husband quit this time of trouble and is now trying the realities of eternity.

Mr. Thomas Anderson departed this life on Thursday the 15th of December, 1864, at 9 o'clock P.M. Mr. Anderson was only sick three days. He had been suffering with a disease of the lungs for many years and finally when exposed to camp life, cold settled on his lungs and brought him speedily to death. He was a member of the Church for five years so he informed me and never during his illness seemed to doubt his religion. About two hours before he died he called my name, adding, "I am not afraid to die. All is well with me now." He then requested his effects to be sent to his wife. He mentioned some few articles, especially one canteen, one tin cup, and one blanket, and one or two suits of clothes. These are all here and in charge of Lieutenant Barrett, who gave me his word that he would send all of his effects to his wife by the first opportunity and I fully believe he will do it.

Mr. Anderson was a member of Company "I" of this regiment and has made an agreeable soldier and a good soldier so far as his physical ability would allow.

I wish Mrs. Anderson to know that Mr. Anderson was well cared for during his illness and in his dying hours everything reasonable was done to make his pillow pleasant during the time death seemed enthroned upon his countenance. He seemed to suffer none and his last moment passed without the stir of a muscle. While gazing on his countenance while his vitals were engaged with the monster Death, my mind was forcibly struck with this language of the poet:

His grace can make a dying bed
Soft as downy pillows are.

I do hope that Mrs. Anderson will not trouble and grieve for her husband, for he certainly left unmistakable and undoubted evidence that God's grace is sufficient in death. I know it seems hard for friends to depart this life. Yet when our Father in Heaven is so kind as to remit all of one's sins and qualifies one for an inmate of Heaven and then by death beckons him away to the company and happiness of angels, it does seem wicked to complain.

Now I hope that Mrs. Anderson will remember that we are not our own people, that we are bought, that we cost both blood and death. The Great I Am, God, gave His Son, yes, His only Son to suffer, bleed, and die for us. Thus we see that we belong to God, and when he calls, we must willingly obey. We do not die. The soul, the immortal part, and the body, the mortal part, simply separate and the body returns to its mother, Earth, and the soul returns to God, to whom it belongs. Another happy thought: in Heaven there is no war. There is no sickness nor death but all peace and all life. There the wicked cease to trouble, and the weary are at rest.

I wish you, Rebeca, to show this to Mr. and Mrs. Carter that Mrs. Anderson learn these facts. I am sorry that I am not able to write a more expressive letter, but I have given the facts as near as my mind would or will serve me. Give my kind respects to Uncle Wormley and family and to all others that may inquire. H. H. Hall is well. William Younger is well. In fact all of the Dallas boys are well. Little Billy Trauber is hearty and saucy. Joe McConnell is very hearty. He at this time is engaged in a game of ball with the boys and I could hear him laugh and holler for two miles. If you see Mr. Shepherd, tell him that Tommy is well and a fine soldier. Mr. Lenard is in fine health at this time. Nearly all of our old troops are in good health but a great many of Company "H" are sick, and I think that it looks very much like robbing the grave to send such men as the majority of those into the field.

Now I must close but before I close I must tell you that Mr. Marchant and myself have just returned from a visit to the country to see an old fortune teller, but I have not room to give you our fortunes at length as the old fiend gave them. I will only say that I went there a disbeliever and I still disbelieve. I reason this way: if the old creature has any supernatural power of foreknowing or telling the future and reading on the invisible mists what is to transpire it must be from Heaven (from God), for the Devil has no power of foreknowing or telling the future. If he had, he would never have rebelled in Heaven and be thus cast down into Hell. Now the conduct of this woman is good and sufficient evidence that she corresponds with the Devil and _____ she has no foreknowledge.

Write soon and often. Tell Father to write. I love to hear from home.

H. M. Barnes

In 1873 tragedy again struck the family, Nine-year-old Lucy Catherine died suddenly. Lucy was a beautiful child, the pride and joy of the family, and the depth of grief at her passing is indicated by a poignant story which has survived to the present. Only a few days before her sudden illness she had accompanied her 12-year-old brother, Henry, to run his bird trap. However, when Henry instructed her to hold a trapped bird while he reset the trap, she freed the bird instead. Henry in a burst of anger struck Lucy across the face. Within a few hours Lucy had collapsed with a fever and shortly died. Whether rightly or not, Henry for the remainder of his life blamed himself for her death.

Despite the rigors of pioneer life, the widowed Naomi successfully reared six of her nine children to adulthood and lived to see them comfortably established with homes of their own. She died at the home of her son Henry on 29 July 1894. Naomi was the daughter of James Jones, a Kentuckian who had migrated to Lewis County, Missouri, around 1829. Naomi was born near Maywood in that county on 25 October 1832.

SILAS R. AND ELIZABETH ANN ANDERSON BRYANT

Silas and Elizabeth Bryant and their infant son, William T., arriving in Dallas County about 1849, built a cabin about a mile northwest of the previously described homes later built by her father, William, and brother, Thomas. Eventually Silas replaced the cabin with a small frame home which still stands on Zion Road, now serving as a barn. Most information available on this family group has passed down by word of mouth. These stories tell that Silas Bryant was a native of New Jersey, but that his father died at an early age and that his mother married a prosperous Maryland lawyer. Unable to get along with his step-father, Silas migrated to Missouri, where he met and eventually married Elizabeth Ann Anderson. This couple became parents of three more sons, Andrew J., Francis Marion, and John Reagan, born in Dallas County before Elizabeth died sometime between 1860 and 1866. Silas joined the Confederate Army on 15 January 1862 and served for one year in Company C of the 18th Texas Cavalry. Both Silas and Elizabeth Bryant are buried in the Anderson cemetery.

ANDREW LAIR ANDERSON

Andrew L. Anderson, the second child of William and Celia Anderson, remained in Missouri until the advent of the Civil War. His was one of those unfortunate families which split over the secession issue which kept Missouri in upheaval throughout the course of the war. Andrew was evidently the only one of his immediate family sympathetic with the secessionist viewpoint, and eventually feelings grew so tense within the family that he began to fear for his life. Finally, after escaping a Unionist posse summoned by his own daughter, Andrew left Missouri and sought asylum among his relatives in Dallas County. Little is known of Andrew Anderson after this time. However one article in Dallas Herald (23 July 1870) mentions his serving on a committee organized at the Scyene community to draw up a resolution in support of the work of the Justice of Peace Courts of the County. He died 19 July 1885 and is buried in the family cemetery.

WILLIAM LAIR AND ELIZA MORRIS ANDERSON

William Lair Anderson and his wife Eliza situated on a tract of land just north and west of that of Silas and Elizabeth Bryant. However the exact site of his first home is not known. "Uncle Billy", as he was called by the community in his later years, was a fervently religious man--a "shouting Methodist" of the old stock. He was one of the builders of the Locust Grove Methodist Church. The Locust Grove community was situated in the vicinity of present-day Zion, Locust Grove, and Bobtown roads, and its earliest population consisted largely of Andersons, Bryants, and Lovings. William also participated in the civic affairs of his community, serving as trustee in Precinct 5, District 11, of Dallas County schools. "Uncle Billy" became something of a medical curiosity in the community when a tree fell on his head, opening a hole in his skull. Some physician, evidently with remarkable ability for his day and time, closed the puncture with a silver dollar, which William carried under his scalp for the remainder of his life with no complications.

Eliza Morris Anderson was born on 21 April 1825 in Kentucky, the daughter of Austin and Nancy Morris. The Morris family later moved to Lewis County, Missouri, where William and Eliza were married on 9 April 1845. Eliza had been fond of William Lair since her early teens. Her sister, Polly, had been engaged to him during this time of Eliza's life, but had "jilted" him for someone else. When Eliza learned that her sister did not intend to marry William, she burst into tears and said that when she grew up she would marry "Mr. William". And so she did, when she was 20 and he was 28 years of age. It seems that Eliza was remembered by her relatives and neighbors as being rather frivolous and vain, at least by the austere standards of her day. The best remembered example of her vanity is the fact that during illnesses and confinements, she kept a brand new "thunder mug" (chamber pot) under her bed---- which was not unusual except that it was filled with a homemade cosmetic concoction which she applied with regularity, despite her state of health.

William and Eliza reared seven children, the eldest three of which were born in Missouri: James Austin, John William ("Joe John"), George Washington, Lite Morris, Missus Tidwell (Bud), Obitha Hampton, and Samuel Andrew. Eliza Morris Anderson died on 28 March 1883, and her husband, William L., died on 11 May 1899. Both are buried in Anderson cemetery.

JOHN LAIR AND EMILY JANE PEAK ANDERSON

Although John and Emily Anderson were the first of the clan to migrate to Texas and accumulated considerable real estate in Dallas County, relatively little information about them has survived until the present. John Anderson's headright lay about half-way between the present cities of Garland and Rowlett. It was bounded on the south by what is now Highway 66 and on the east by Rowlett Creek. His cabin was built in a dense pecan grove which later came to be known as Anderson Park and which still persists at the intersection of Centerville Road and Highway 66.

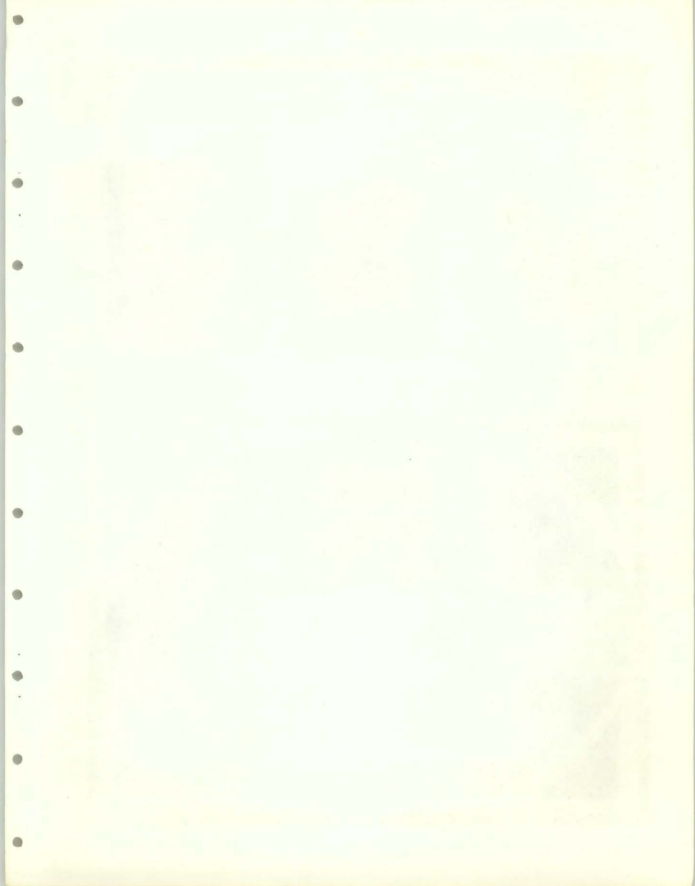

John L. Anderson is a key character in the following anecdote published in the Dallas Herald, 23 March 1878:

Yesterday morning Sheriff Moon succeeded in arresting a horse thief named B. Hargrove, whom he jailed. Early that morning about the break of day, the toll-gatherer at the bridge saw a man ride off the causeway into the woods, where he tied his horse. Shortly afterwards he passed over the bridge into the city. By some means Sheriff Moon became aware of the fact, when he dispatched Deputy Rice to watch the horse, and that officer had hardly got himself concealed before Hargrove came down to the animal with some oats. The deputy came forward and arrested him, but he was indignant and disclaimed that the animal was stolen, saying that he had raised it himself, which he could prove by divers witnesses. The officer brought him and the horse into the city, he insisting all the time that it was his horse and that he came by it honestly, and that he could prove by his neighbors that he had raised the animal. Sheriff Moon told the deputy to go with him to his home and ascertain whether or not it was his property as he had represented it to be. When near Rowlett's creek they saw Mr. John Anderson, a farmer who lives about fifteen miles northeast of the city, riding toward them, when Hargrove, who appeared to be excited, remarked that since he thought, he believed that Mr. Anderson had raised the horse. On coming up, Mr. Anderson asked Hargrove what he was doing on his horse, when Hargrove said he had traded for the animal with another man. Mr. Anderson said that it was his horse, and that it had been stolen from his place Wednesday night. Hargrove was brought back to the city and taken before Justice Peak, who committed him to jail. This is not the first time he has been there, having been put in some time ago on a charge of stealing cattle from a farmer named Huckleby.

Emily Peak was born 6 February 1832 in Kentucky and later relocated in Lewis County, Missouri, where she was married to John Anderson. They were the parents of the following children, all born in Dallas County: Nancy Ann, Lucy Jane, William S. Peak, James R., George William Peak, John William Peak, and Mary E.

John L. Anderson was active in community affairs. According to an article in the Dallas Herald (13 September 1883), he served on a committee of Rose Hill farmers appointed to settle a dispute between Dallas cotton buyers and county farmers. He and his wife were charter members of the Dallas County Pioneer Association, established at the Court House on 18 July 1875.

John Lair Anderson died 23 June 1885; his wife, Emily, 5 June 1912. They are buried in Anderson cemetery.

WORMLEY AND LUCY ANN ANDERSON CARTER

All available evidence suggests that John Lair Anderson traveled to Texas from Missouri with Wormley Carter, a colorful character who later was to become John's brother-in-law. Their convoy arrived in Dallas County in May of 1846, approximately a month after its departure from Lewis County, Missouri. Wormley Carter became a charter member of the Dallas County Pioneer Association.

Much interesting information survives on the life of Wormley Carter, due partly to his many activities in public affairs and partly to his close friendship with the editor of the Dallas Herald, E. C. McLure, who published accounts of many of Wormley's adventures. Wormley Carter closely fits the stereotype of the American frontiersman-- a sturdy, energetic, curious, indomitable individual with a sense of his manifest destiny to conquer the unknown mixed perhaps with just a touch of wanderlust. Wormley was born 19 June 1816 in Loudon County, Virginia, later moved with his parents to Kentucky, and in 1843 migrated to Missouri, where he evidently became closely acquainted with the Andersons. On coming to Dallas County, he was granted a patent adjacent on the northwest to that of John L. Anderson. This tract now lies within the city limits of Garland. There is no evidence that he made his home there, however, for he was living in the village of Dallas in 1849 (according to an article in the Dallas Herald, 11 April 1874). His home was located at the corner of Ross Avenue and Harwood Street, where he cultivated a large fruit orchard and grape vineyard.

His orchard and vineyard were, however, the extent of Wormley Carter's agricultural endeavors, for he was by nature and by experience a hunter, not a farmer. Editor McLure in one article (27 June 1874) referred to Wormley in his later days as "an old pioneer who prolongs life by semiannual haunts in the woods." His restlessness and inclination to travel are demonstrated in several Herald articles. In one instance the McKinney Inquirer is quoted, telling of Wormley bringing up a wagon-load of catfish from the Trinity to sell in that town. Another article cites his return from a trip to Hood County and his report on progress in that part of Texas. The Herald (30 May 1874) tells an amusing anecdote which suggests much about Wormley Carter's personality and peculiarities.

HE WENT BUT IS BACK AGAIN

Yes, he ate his breakfast at his home in Dallas one morning, and next day took his supper in Hannibal, Missouri, some seven hundred miles farther north. He was bound for Duluth, the jumping off place on Lake Superior, where the Northern Pacific Railroad begins; thence by said road to Puget's Sound on the North Pacific; thence to William H. Seward's paradise in Alaska, close on to Behring's Straits, in the vicinity of the bypass over which the first Asiatic emigrants to America passed en route for the valleys of the Gila and of Mexico. That was his destination, and he reached Hannibal in one-twentieth of the time it took him to come to Dallas County, Texas, twenty-eight years ago. He became bewildered and was obfuscated muchly. He forgot whether he was an American freeman, a Winnebago chief, or an Arab of the desert. But, on crossing the great father of waters at Quincy, Illinois, a new light came to his vision, and he re-awakened to the fact that on the corner of Ross and Harwood streets, in the city of Dallas, in the state of Texas, he had left a baby, recently born unto him in his old age--a rare child, and worthy to be the son of the ancient Gracchi. The thought overwhelmed him, inasmuch that he forgot Duluth, Puget's Sound, Alaska, the Arabian desert, the Gila and the ancient valley of the Aztecs, and asking forgiveness of his sins and the protection of his patron saint, he resolved to return once more to hug to his bosom that baby. Vibrating for a few days in Adams County, Illinois, Marion, Lewis, and Knox counties, Missouri, he struck as near a bee line for that baby as the iron rails would permit, and yesterday morning rushed breathless into the presence of his gratified but astonished wife faintly gasping, "Whar is my boy?" A good breakfast, a refreshing cup of coffee and the sight of the baby soon restored him to consciousness, whereupon he wended his way down town, and everybody, white and black, old and young, joyfully welcomed Uncle Wormley Carter home again. As each saluted him, he smiled a sagacious smile and said, "Boys, it's the finest child I ever saw, and if I'd had it at the state fair, Swishers's boy wouldn't have grabbed the premium."

Wormley Carter seems also to have been an avid amateur naturalist, which is not too surprising in such an outdoorsman and adventurer. One Herald article mentions a 6 foot 9 inch snake skin displayed about town by Carter. Another tells of his bringing back from a trip to West Texas a piece of unusual petrified wood for his friend, Jacob Boll, the noted early day Dallas County naturalist. The following article, entitled "A Radical Monster" appeared in the Herald of 16 September 1871:

Quite an excitement was gotten up in our usually quiet burg the other day by the advent of a monstrous alligator at the tail of a wagon drawn by a stout yoke of oxen. It was soon surrounded by a crowd and proved an object of no little wonder. Its length was eleven feet and four inches and its girth over four feet, while its jaws were fully a foot wide. With its body enveloped in a _____ hide, tough enough to turn away bullets, its tail covered with _____ scales, its broad mouth distended, showing its long sharp teeth and still giving evidence of vitality and power, it looked like the very devil himself. We have heard of larger and longer ones, but we never wish to see them--we are satisfied with this. Apparently it could have swallowed the whole Treasury of Texas and a dozen small Fifteenth Amendments without difficulty and been hungry for more. Talk of your crocodiles of the Nile. Pshaw, come to Dallas, if you want to see things on a big scale.

This truly terrific monster was caught with a rope snare in the Trinity, a little above the mouth of Turtle Creek, by our old and worthy citizen, Mr. Wormley Carter, assisted by young Mr. Jas. Seydell and Mr. J. Conklin. The snare was baited and several unsuccessful attempts were made to secure him before the final triumph. He had eaten three opossums and several legs of mutton before his capture and its snorting and struggles, when _____, were tremendous and frightful to witness. We understood his skin will be stuffed and sent to adorn the museum of Central Park. It should be consigned to Greeley, who, since his pleasant visit to Texas, is prepared to do full justice to productions of all kinds, carpet-baggers, scalliwags, and alligators.

Aside from the amusing side of his nature, Wormley Carter played an important role in Dallas County history. He was one of the members of the party which surveyed the boundaries of the new County of Dallas after its formation in 1846. According to the Northern Standard (10 September 1853) he signed a statement by Peters Colony citizens testifying that Judge John H. Reagan's address to the colonists prior to the Hedgecock Rebellion had not been inflammatory and could not have contributed to the riot. He served as constable in 1856 and he was elected sheriff of Dallas County in 1859. On 12 March 1862 Wormley enlisted in the service of the Confederacy for the duration of the war, joining Company A of the 31st Texas Cavalry. He served on the committee organizing the Conservative Party in Dallas County in March, 1868. In October, 1870 Wormley was appointed as overseer of county roads, a position he resigned in June, 1872. Later in September of 1872 he was elected vice-chairman of the Democratic-Conservative Party of Dallas County. Wormley also served on the 1874 grand jury investigating and evaluating the county government facilities, procedures, and records.

Wormley Carter was married to Lucy Ann Anderson on 5 January 1854 in Dallas County. Their family consisted of 7 children: Walter S., Herbert, John Morgan, Percy, Ida, Lela, and Verta. The Carters sold their home at Ross and Harwood in 1880 and moved to Denton County near Lewisville. Lucy Anderson Carter died there on 18 November 1908. Wormley preceded her in death but the exact date is not known. Both are buried in the Flower Mound Presbyterian Cemetery, Denton County, Texas.

Abandoned cemetery found at Pecan Valley Farm about 4 miles northwest of Whitesboro, Texas. Very near the county line of Grayson and Cook Counties. 3 miles west of U. S. 377. It is completely overgrown, but 4 huge cedars about 36 inches in circumference seem to mark the 4 corners. 4 stone crypts made of native sandstone, apparently hand hewn of blocks about 4" x 8" x 16" are near the big cedars. No headstone were found in or on the crypts. The cemetery is seemingly divided into 3 family sections. Boy Scouts of Troop 721, Dallas, cleaned out the undergrowth and small trees, uncovered headstones and footstones, replaced the stones in 3 of the crypts on September 25, 1971.

THE SAMUELL FAMILY OF DALLAS

PART I

by

COL. EDWARD W. SAMUELL, JR. (Ret.)
10652 Les Jardins, Dallas, Tx. 75229

The family of Dr. W. W. Samuell, philanthropist-physician of the City of Dallas, famous for his work in the field of surgery and for his legacy of the great parks of Dallas, has its origins in the British Isles. Present, yet still incomplete, investigation of the family suggests that the immediate ancestor of the first identified Samuell in America came either from Cornwall or Wales via the West Indian island of Barbados about the middle of the 17th century. Definitive information on the early history of the Samuell family must await the receipt of more conclusive proof of available data.

The progenitor of the Samuell family on the North American Continent is Anthony Samuell, hereafter referred to as senior to distinguish him from his oldest son. Born ca. 1660, probably in Virginia, he is first identified as a planter from Kingston Parish, Gloucester County, who purchased 300 acres of land on Button's Ridge in Sittenbourne Parish, Essex County, on 12 November 1694 for 5,500 pounds "of good sweet scented tobacco and casque."

A strong likelihood exists that Anthony Samuell, Senior, was married for the first time circa 1681. This unknown wife is believed to have borne him two sons, Anthony, Junior, circa 1682 and James about 1685. Prior to the turn of the century, Mary Samuell, presently believed to have been his second wife, bore him two sons, Henry and Thomas.

A month after his purchase of the land in Essex County, Anthony, Senior, witnessed on 17 December 1694 the sale of 200 acres of land by John Baker, who sold him his Button Ridge land, to William Williams, which was adjacent to his own land. Within ten years, Anthony, Senior, expanded his 300 acre holding to 400 acres by the purchase of 100 acres of adjacent property from his neighbor, William Williams, on 10 September 1703. This 100 acres was apparently in partial payment of a debt incurred by William Williams in favor of Anthony Samuell, Senior.

During the years 1703 through 1706, he served as a member of the Essex County jury which settled land disputes. On 8 February 1706, Anthony, Senior, along with his two oldest sons, witnessed the sale of the last remaining acreage of his neighbor, William Williams, to Edward Gouldman. By this time, the name of the parish in which they resided had changed from Sittenbourne to St. Ann.

On 30 March 1706 Anthony, Senior, further expanded his land holdings through the purchase of 50 acres of land near Occupasia Swamp. He purchased it for 5,150 pounds of tobacco from John Ridgdale. This purchase was followed by another purchase from the same Ridgdale of an unknown quantity on 21 July 1707. During the next year Anthony, Senior apparently co-signed a loan with Larken Chew because on 14 August 1708 the sheriff of Essex County ordered the attachment of tobacco at both estates as the result of a complaint made by one John Miller against Phillip Lake for a debt of 3000 pounds of tobacco.

In April 1711 Anthony Samuell, Senior, again expanded his land holdings; first, by purchasing 416 acres for 5000 pounds of tobacco from Samuel Ellits, located on the south side of a branch of the Mattapony River; and second, by the exchange of 300 acres of land for 100 acres by John Ridgdale. On 8 July 1714 Anthony, Senior, and his son, Anthony, Junior, appraised the estate of the late Rachel Warren. By 1715 his estate comprised 550 acres, according to the Virginia Quit Rent Rolls of that year.

About this time, Anthony, Junior, is believed to have married Mary Ann Rogers, the daughter of Giles Rogers and Sarah Iverson. By this time Anthony, Junior, had become signatory to two bonds and owned 100 acres of land in Essex County. On 22 February 1715 he was one of five signatories to a 500 pound sterling bond for the executors of the estate of Robert Foster. On 21 October the same year he was one of three signatories to a 300 pound sterling bond for Job Speerman, the guardian of Elizabeth Martin.

Early in 1716 Mary Ann Samuell gave birth to John, the first of seven sons, believed to have been named after her favorite brother, John Rogers.

In May 1717 he expanded his land holdings by 50 acres with the purchase of this land from Bryan Ward for 2000 pounds of tobacco and five shillings silver. This land purchase was followed by the acquisition of another 130 acres of land from the same Bryan Ward which expanded his holdings to the Occupacia Swamp. This time he paid over 3000 pounds of sweet scented tobacco. He did not stop with these purchases. In July 1719 he was granted 400 acres of land in Saint John's Parish by Alexander Spotswood, Lieutenant Governor of the State of Virginia. In the spring of 1731 his father died, leaving him the plantation on which he lived.

On 27 November 1729 Anthony Samuell, Senior, drew up his will, which was proved on 15 June 1731. He was survived by his wife, Mary, his older sons, Anthony, Junior, and James, who received as legacy most of the land that he purchased on Button's Ridge; his younger sons, Henry and Thomas, who inherited the land bought from or exchanged with John Ridgdale; his daughters Ann Colquit, Margaret Hamilton, Judith Bannister, and Mary Sale, and grandchildren John Merchant and Mary Samuell.

Two years later Anthony, Junior, signed a 200 pound bond sterling along with John Rogers, his neighbor and brother-in-law, and William Motley. During the 1740's, he became more active in community affairs, particularly in Caroline County, where much of his land was not situated because of the establishment of this new county. He was a jury member in 1741 and in 1743. He was instrumental in expanding the road network of Caroline County. In March 1742, he surveyed a new road which passed through Sutton's Ford; in October of the same year he repaired Guinias' Bridge; and in February of the following year he participated with George Rogers and James Martin in the construction of a road which linked Rogers' Mill with the main Caroline County thoroughfare. In October 1748 he was appointed overseer of a road from James Martin's place to the Spotsylvania-Caroline County line and in the following March he built two bridges over Ginnings' gut as well as repaired the South River bridge. In addition he appraised the estate of George Goodloe on 11 December 1741; he participated in the appraisal of George Marsh's estate on 10 March 1749; and on 11 March 1743 he deeded gifts to his two eldest living sons, James and Anthony.

Although the decade was active for Anthony Samuell, Junior, it apparently started with tragedy. His oldest son, John Samuell died prematurely leaving a wife, the former Sarah Coghill, daughter of Frederick Coghill and Sarah Goss Coghill, and an infant son, William. Little is known of John other than the fact that he served as a jurymen in the case of Little Page versus Holliday and a case involving the will of Benjamin Walker. John was believed to have been 26 when he died.

Little is known of the last decade of the life of Anthony Samuell, Junior. Prior to 15 September 1760 he died in Essex County, survived by his sons, Anthony, James, Peter, Giles, Thomas, and William, by his daughters Elizabeth Martin, Easter Sale, and Margrit, and grandsons Anthony Noel and Robert Smith.

The relationship between Anthony, Junior, and his grandson, William, is likewise very vague. Although young William was close to 18 years of age at the death of his grandfather, no mention is made of William in the will. To date no information has been uncovered which suggests that the grandfather had anything to do with the grandson. However, during this period William's mother Sarah was to remarry to James Colquitt.

By the time he was twelve, William Samuell, hereafter referred to as senior to distinguish him from his oldest son, was having some difficulty with his stepfather, as evidenced by a suit of petition brought by him against his stepfather in the amount of three pounds eight shillings in 1754. Nevertheless he seems to have been favored by his grandfatehr, Frederick Coghill, who willed him two slaves in December 1758. Shortly following the receipt of these slaves and probably because of this will, Peter Samuell, the uncle of William Samuell, Senior, and son of Anthony Samuell, Junior, became the guardian of William. Following Peter's assumption guardianship, he committed his nephew to turn over his claim to the land of his father, John Samuell, and one of the slaves to his stepfather, James Colquitt, in return for his mother's right of dower to these lands as well as ownership of nine slaves. On 18 January 1768, William, Senior confirmed this settlement, the bill of sale being proved on 20 June 1768 by Ambrose Kilkington and Isaac Hawes.

In 1760 at the probable age of 18, William, Senior, reportedly married Frances Goodwin, daughter of Daniel Goodwin, later of Gallatin County, Kentucky. His oldest son, William Samuell, Junior, was born a year later. Little is known of the family until after the outbreak of war when William, Junior, appears to have entered the military service as an ensign in May 1779. Following completion of his service in the Revolution, he seems to have returned to his father's home where he remained until the decision was made to take the family to Kentucky. William, Junior, may have led the family west because a strong likelihood exists that he participated with frontier forces in the 1790-1794 battles against the Indians, west of the Appalachians.

Following the end of these Indian campaigns, William Samuell, Junior, married Judith Dupuy on 24 December 1795 in Woodford County, Kentucky. Judith was of Huguenot descent, her parents being Bartholomew Dupuy and Mary Mottley Dupuy, originally from Amelia County, Virginia.

William Samuell, Senior, again appears on the scene in the will of his mother, Sarah Colquit, who left her only son by John Samuell a gold ring on 22 June 1796. William, Senior, six months later became a grandfather. On 1 December 1796 the first and only son of William, Junior, and Judith was born in Henry County, Kentucky. His name was Washington Samuell. Two years later in 1798 his sister Polly was born. Tragedy struck shortly thereafter with the death of Judith Dupuy Samuell, possibly from the childbirth of Polly.

Both William, Senior, and William, Junior, became prominent in Henry County, Kentucky. On 10 August 1799 Lewis Craig sold William, Senior, 450 acres of land. Following this purchase he grew in prominence in Newcastle, the county seat of Henry County. Within two years he occupied the most prominent house in the city and by January 1804 he was recommended to be justice of the peace in Henry County.

His son, William, Junior, remarried on 10 February 1800 to Ann Clark Marshall and subsequently had three children: Nancy, who married Samuel Pryor on 22 June 1824; Eliza, who married James Pryor on 13 October 1831; and William, who married Eliza Bartlett on 2 October 1841. Shortly following his marriage to Ann Marshall, William, Junior, was commissioned a captain in the Kentucky Corn Stalk Militia, the fore-runner of the Kentucky State Militia.

Again tragedy struck when William, Junior, died prematurely during the first half of 1805, prior to the death of his father, William Samuell, Senior. The latter died prior to August 1808. He was survived by his sons, Reuben, John, and Robert Samuell; his three grandchildren by his daughter Sarah, the late wife of Edmund Vaughn; his daughter Elizabeth, wife of Henry Pemberton; his grandchildren by his late son, William Samuell, Junior; his daughters, Fanny Goodwin, Agatha Ballard and Phoebe Mountjoy; and his wife Frances.

So far we have followed the ancestral line of Dr. W. W. Samuell from Anthony Samuell, Senior, to Anthony Samuell, Junior, to John Samuell in Virginia, to William Samuell, Senior and William Samuell, Junior, of Kentucky. In Part II of this history we will continue with the line from Washington Samuell of Kentucky, to Hazael Offutt Samuell of Dallas, father of Dr. W. W. Samuell and the last police commissioner of Dallas, prior to the adoption of the current Charter of the City of Dallas in 1907. The above story of the Samuell Family is in substance a summary of the historical data available. No attempt has been made in this short article to reproduce the documentation available. A more detailed account exists of each member of the ancestral line with detailed footnotes and in most instances accompanied by a reproduction of complete wills and land records where available. In addition the available documentation is accompanied by deductive reasoning in writing where it is necessary to bring certain events in line in the absence of specific data. For anyone who desires to examine this documentation and more detailed accounts of the principal individuals in the ancestral line, such will be available in the Samuell files in the Local History and Genealogical Section of the Dallas Public Library.

SHADY GROVE BAPTIST CHURCH
Franklin, Simpson Co., Ky.

Abstracted by
Dorothea Good Russell, 2737 Farmers Branch Lane, Dallas, Texas 75234

A few miles out of the town of Franklin in the eastern section of Simpson County, Kentucky is a small white frame church and adjoining cemetery. It is called the Shady Grove Baptist Church and was organized 15 May 1841.

Many of the charter members as well as members joining later were ancestors of families who came to the Dallas County area in the 1850-1870 period, locating in the Richardson, Carrollton and Farmers Branch area.

Joseph J. Butler and Robert F. Butler, sons of George Butler, Sr., first minister of Shady Grove, were founders of the Mt. Calvary Baptist Church in Richardson, Texas about 1865. Many of the Charter members of that church were members of the families of the Shady Grove Church.

There are many other names mentioned in the Minutes of this church, but those on the list below are known to have descendants still living in the Dallas County area.

A zeroxed copy of the Minutes from 15 May 1841 through 21 May 1853 is in the possession of Mrs. Russell.

Below are the names of some of these people and the dates they joined the church:

THINKING OF PUBLISHING?

Many books can be mimeographed, as this Quarterly is. This is the least expensive way to publish.

B & W Printers have printed the Local History and Genealogical Society Quarterly for many years. We are interested in genealogy and know the care necessary in printing a genealogical book. We will work closely with you to have your book exactly as you want it. We can make excellent reproductions of your pictures.

Call Mrs. Fultz, 941-5553, to discuss your needs. Let her tell you about our new Quick Copying Service.
