SPEAKING OUT...

This issue of the quarterly brings several changes; hopefully to your liking. The Editorial Staff did so in order to keep the dues at the same price it has been for years. This was authorized by your Board of Directors. It also meant more work on the part of the Staff, such as putting the Quarterly together ourselves and doing our own typing.

We are new at this and hope that you will send us your comments and criticisms. The changes were incorporated in order to save on rising costs.

In the process, two members of the Staff suffered lingering illnesses which slowed them down for a while, Louise Morris and Paul Jarry. Both are doing much better now.

In future issues, we hope to use this column for your comments and criticisms. Hopefully, you will offer suggestions and let us know of your likes and dislikes. This will be the MEMBERS COLUMN...an opportunity to let us know what you think and what you would like to see in your forthcoming QUARTERLIES

Our annual Elections will be held at the June meeting. Any of you who would be interested in working more actively in the Society, may wish to contact the Chairman of the Nominating Committee, Miss Dorothy O. Sparrow at 827-2921 or Mrs. Lucile Anderson Boykin at the Library

The Society has several worthwhile projects of genealogical value in the offing. If you wish to participate in these, please contact Lucile Boykin or Mr. Percy C. Fewell, our President. Your services would be most welcomed.

Now that the State Archives is open on Saturdays, any of you who have the chance, take advantage of it.

... HAPPENINGS ...

Percy Fewell, our President and Mrs. Mary Sue Caruth, our Program Chairman, with the help of Lucile Boykin, arranged to have two programs at the Library in recent months. The first was held in October and the other in February. Lloyd Bookstruck of the Library participated in both programs. Mrs. Jean Lush took part in the first of these programs. Most of those who attended these meetings were not members of the Society.

On January 26th, a Meeting of several Dallas County Societies was held at the Mesquite Public Library. Those in attendance were: Mrs. Georgia Myers Ogle and Mrs. Peggy Oliver of the Peters Colony; Mr. Bill Hadsky of the Garland Society; Mrs. Marie Hughes and Mrs. Biggerstaff of the Balch Springs Society; Mrs. Exa Thomas, Mr. Paul Jarry and Mrs. Jean Lush of the Dallas Society. Mrs. Lush moderated the Program. The reason for this meeting was to organize an Editors and Authors Roundtable for the benefit of the Editors of the various quarterlies and those who plan to publish their family histories in the future. Special Guest at this meeting was Mr. Aubrey Temples of the U.S. Post Office in Dallas. Another meeting, not yet scheduled, will be held at the Lakewood Public Library. Those interested in this Group, please contact Paul Jarry at 692-7994 for more information. This Group will hold quarterly meetings and publish a quarterly newsletter at six week intervals.

Anyone who might be interested in a field trip to the State Archives sometime in the future, please let Exa Thomas or Paul Jarry know. It has not been set as yet and will in NO WAY be sponsored by this Society. If enough people are interested, it would be for everyone.

IN RETROSPECT

By C. M. Carthew-Yorstoun

In 1922, the writer, Charles Morden Carthew-Yorstoun, returned from Scotland to the United States, after the death of his father, Lt. Col. Morden Carthew-Yorstoun of East Tinwald, Dumfrieshire, and on his way to visit his mother's brother, John Knight at Decatur, Alabama. I sailed on the old "Leviathan".

Upon reaching New York, I telephoned the wife of my great uncle, Will N. Harben, the writer, Aunt Maybelle Chandler Harben Mears, who asked me to come out to see them that Sunday evening.

Aunt Maybelle was, before she married Will N. Harben, Maybelle Chandler of Kingstree, South Carolina. She was twenty years younger than Uncle Will. Later, Uncle Will, knowing his days were short, before he died, arranged with his best friend, Mr. Mears, who had lost his wife, to marry his widow, who would inherit the Harben home and take care of his two children, Chandler and Elizabeth Harben. To this union, the three would bring certain literary royalties from his books. This arrangement was made by Uncle Will before he died and the four children of Mr. Mears were added to that of his own, upon this union later.

I visited Aunt Maybelle Harben Mears, at her home, a sturdy red sandstone house at 60 Kilborn Road, Garden City, where I met the very fine and talented Mears children and after Sunday night supper, we all pitched in to wash the dishes while they "ragged" me as being a "Little Lord Fauntleroy" from Oxford. One of the Mears boys showed me his paintings. Later on his paintings appeared in the "Saturday Evening Post".

The next morning, Aunt Maybelle and I talked on the family. It was at this time, while we sat on the sofa in her living room that I made Aunt Maybelle promise me she would write her memoirs one day.

Fifty-one years later, 1973, I received a copy of Aunt Maybelle's Memoirs from her son Chandler Harben's daughter, Mrs. Philip L. Alger (Judy), now residing with her husband and three children in Louisville Kentucky.

Mrs. Elizabeth Cox, nee Harben, is the daughter of Will N. Harben and resides at Point-O-Wood Road in Darien, Connecticut. She has three children of her own.

Will N. Harben came to Dallas, Texas and set up a general store called the "Emporium" on Elm Street. Later through his friendship with George Dealey, President of the Dallas Morning News, he was encouraged to go back to writing and subsequently moved to New York, writing twenty books for Harper's. He was also a close friend of Mark Twain and originally a reporter on the Atlanta Constitution with Joel Chandler Harris.

MEMOIRS OF MAYBELLE CHANDLER

To reach Grandfather Chandler's farm, we had to travel ten miles on a white sandy road; the sand was a foot deep in places. Along this road, which leads from Kingstree, S. C., the nearest village, were many large live oak trees, with gray Spanish moss hanging from the limbs. There were holly trees, full of red berries and sweet-flowered magnolias. In the low swampy places vines grew luxuriantly. The Black River follows the road for some distance, its waters dark, almost black and made to seem more so by the whiteness of the sandy banks. Further on there is a slight rise in the road which was proudly called the "hill". I remember quite well that the old black man who drove for us would give the horses an extra jerk with the reins and sometimes would have to use his whip. We passed cotton fields, fields where black-eyed peas grew, fields of sugar can and corn. There were scrubby patches of pine trees dotted with Negro cabins made of pine sapling logs held together with clay and with chimneys also of clay. Half-dressed children, barefoot, played about the doors. An ox under a leaky shed beside each cabin slowly chewed dry fodder. Chickens carelessly ran across the road, cackling. Black hands waved a greeting followed by joyous laughter.

At the head of the avenue which leads to the house are two large maple trees. On each side are ditches dug for drainage, the banks of which were coved with blackberries. Cotton fields surround the house, and in low places rice has been planted.

On arriving we were greeted with the yelping of the hounds, which are kept for possum hunting. My sleep was often disturbed by their doleful barking in the early morning hours, when some member of the family went hunting - if lucky he might get a fox or a coon.

A brick walk bordered with crepe myrtle led to the high steps. A piazza on two sides of the house was supported by columns of white-washed brick. On another side was a well with a sweep and oak bucket bound with brass rings. Three tall pines protected the well from the sun and the water was good to drink and cold. Beyond the pines was a scuppernong grape arbor, whose sweet perfume from the ripening grapes filled the air. At the back of the house was a brick kitchen, not connected with the main house, and behind it, the Negro cabins. A large garden and watermelon patch were located nearby. A lone fig tree, always stingy with its fruit, grew by the door of the smokehouse. At hog-killing time this old house was a busy place. Hams were salted, dipped in molasses and black pepper, and then hung from the rafters to be smoked and cured. Sausage meat was ground by hand in small machine seasoned with sage, read and black pepper and, then put in links after which they too were smoked. There was hogshhead cheese, lard, cracklings; the side meat was put in barrels of brine. My grandmother always carried the key to the smokehouse in her pocket with other keys. They were with her always, as much a part of her as her stell-rimmed spectacles.

She wore a little knitted cape over her shoulders. She was a shrewd old lady, wise and just and was much loved by her former slaves of whom she had hundreds. She had owned much of the county in which she lived - over a thousand acres. Grandfather Chandler was her second husband and she was much older than he. They had one son, my father, whom she adored and spoiled. When he grew to manhood, he was sent to Georgia to College; while there he met the man who, twenty years later became my husband.

One of the old Negroes, who had been grandfather's body servant in the Civil War, remained with my family for many years. We called him "Lawyer". He acquired this nickname because on Sundays he wore an old Prince Albert coat and a battered silk top hat. His feet were flat and spread out, but the soles were as hard as stone. He refused to walk in shoes, but would carry them on a stick, slung over his shoulder. Before reaching the Negro church where he preached, he would stop and put them on. His sermons were so filled with hell fire that many of his listeners would fall on the floor in a faint. Their bodies would tremble and their eyes could bulge, they would beg him to chase the devil away. When he had sent Satan on his way, he would become the most gentle and kind old black man.

When I was a child there remained in the simple minds of these descendants of slaves the greatest pride in their "white folks". You either belonged to them, in a way, or you didn't. If you didn't, you were nothing but poor white trash and your lot was not easy.

After my marriage, I often visited my home with my husband who became intensely interested in these trusting black people who served us and refused to leave

Probably the earliest recollection of my childhood was the earthquake of 1884. At the first trembling and rumbling sounds we left the house and went out into the yard away from the trees and buildings. Then, the ground beneath our feet began shaking; there was a terrible roaring sound, which seemed far away. Later there were cracks found in the fields.

We used to walk to school, perhaps two miles away, carrying our lunches in small tin buckets. I wore black, high-buttoned shoes, bound at the toes with a brass band - an optimistic invention of my harassed father to prolong the life of the shoes. We used the old "blue-backed spelling book" of Webster's. The class formed a line and each child was given a word to spell. If you missed, you were sent to the bottom of the class. If you failed to do an arithmetical problem correctly, a younger child was sent to do it for you; you were then forced to stand in the corner on one foot. I am still adept at this - after fifty years!

Perhaps the most humiliating thing I can remember happened at Grandmother's funeral where I noticed that all of the family was weeping. I did not feel like weeping, but the idea must suddenly have come into my head that I should show some grief. I stuck my fingers in my mouth, wet them with spit, and rubbed it on my eyelashes. It is perhaps strange that these small actions should remain so long in my mind, but they must have sunk more deeply in me than I realized.

There is another memory of which I have often felt a little ashamed, because I was older - about fifteen, I believe. I was visiting the home of my aunt on the Santee River. The country there was filled with malaria. Her home was not far from the little church and graveyard where General Francis Marion, the old "Swamp Fox" is buried. I was eager to see the place, for he was my great-great grandmother's brother and the story of his life had been fascinating reading for me.

I became sick with chills and fever, but by doing so, I had my first adventure in love. A young doctor was called to see me. He was tall, with blue eyes and blond hair. His medicines had too good an effect, for I got well far too quickly. I wanted to see him again as something new which I had not known before had taken possession of me. I had to devise a means to have him return! A horrid thought came to me to have another chill, which I did. Unsuspecting, my poor aunt sent word to him to come at once. I shook with all my might, my teeth chattered and I sat with a blanket around me, waiting. My aunt left the room so that he had the opportunity to tell me I wasn't sick. He wanted to know why I had pretended to be. Failing in my excuses, he said that he had hoped to see me again, for he too, had fallen desperately in love with me. We had a short but happy courtship.

I soon left South Carolina for Georgia to visit another aunt and her physician husband. There again I met the man whom I married.... the man who had been my father's schoolmate.

II.

Paris at last! My husband asked me to watch our baggage for a few minutes while he got a cab. I was not in a particularly good mood after crossing the English Channel in rough weather, but I agreed. While waiting, a man whom I later learned was a station detective, spoke to me in French. He spoke with what seemed to me to be the speed of lightning. I had thought that after studying the language a few years, I would at least understand when spoken to, but I did not hear one word which sounded familiar! I looked at him hopelessly and began to weep. My tears only made him more voluble. My husband returned just then and thought that the man had been rude and insulting to me. He was furious, but after a few moments my tears stopped, we explained and apologized humbly to the man, who had only tried to offer his help and proceeded to our cab and pension.

As unknown literary travelers, we did not have an abundance of money. Only French was permitted to be used in the pension which was filled with people who wished to learn the language as quickly as possible. Nearly all were English and Americans, also without much money.

The day after we had arrived at the pension, a friend of my husband who had come over with us, a Southern poet, excitedly knocked on our bedroom door early in the morning and called my husband. We let him. He said, "They've sent my breakfast up to my room. I'm not sick and I don't want it! They'll make me pay extra for it! The fellow wouldn't take it away when I told him to. He just shrugged his shoulders. What'll I do?"

My husband roared with laughter, "I forgot to tell you that they serve what the French call a petite breakfast in one's room. Later the regular breakfast is served. There's no extra charge."

Almost every afternoon we had tea at a delightful little place where strawberries and little cakes were served at ridiculously low prices. The walls had been painted by poor art students who had paid for their meals in this way. We often saw them there in velvet jackets, tams and big black Windsor ties.

We roamed all over Paris and loved it. A funeral was in progress while we were visiting the Madeleine and my husband asked the man in charge something about the funeral, but got his French mixed up and asked if the man was dead. The man sorrowfully replied, "Oui, Monsieur," and glared at my husband strangely.

We wanted to go through the Louvre without guides, but found it almost impossible. My husband and the poet solved the problem by pretending to speak only Choctaw, since the guides seemed to know every other language. When a guide approached, they looked dumb and mumbled incomprehensible guttural syllables ending with "um ah Choctaw". Each guide hopelessly gave up, calling another, who would also fail. I remained silent. Soon they gave up and we strolled unmolested through the halls viewing the art treasures.

We had great fun in Germany, Switzerland and Holland, but had to forgo Italy, since I became ill. In Frankfort, we stopped one day for lunch at a restaurant with many tables on a large porch. We waited a long time before a waiter appeared to take our orders for Wiener Schnitzel and beer. He looked very serious, wore white gloves and seemed very silent for a waiter. Again we waited a long time, and began to wonder why no one else was dining there. At any rate, it was so unearthly quiet. When the waiter returned, we asked him; he informed us that the body of the owner who had just died, was lying in the next room.

The great Cathedral of Cologne was inspiringly beautiful. We sat in silence gazing at the exquisite stained glass windows through which the sun shone in benediction of those who took the time to linger.

We began to long to hear English spoken. England in May is lovely. We had loved our gypsying on the continent, but were aware that we would have to mix some social life with our sightseeing in London, for my husband knew many writers there and we also had some relatives. We were offered the use of several clubs, including the Author's Club.

Due to our limited funds, we had traveled with light baggage and few clothes which resulted in a never-to-be-forgotten experience at a dinner given by a banker having the same name as my husband who admired writers very much. When invited we were told that the dinner was to be informal. I wore my best dress - a simple black one. We were announced with great formality and taken to a large drawing room. I almost died...my knees shook when I saw a dozen or more women - all in magnificent evening gowns, jewels and one even wearing a tiara!

"Immigration Patterns in Colonial America"

by

Dr. Edmund Lacy
Chairman, Division of Humanities
Dallas Baptist College
Dallas, Texas 75211

For many years the United States has been known as the "melting pot of the world." This term was used because the new world took in persons from all over the known world, and apparently fused them into a separate and distinct image. The term "melting pot" was coined near the end of the Colonial Period by a Frenchman named Hector St. John de Crevecoeur who had spent 15 years in the colonies. "Here," he wrote, "individuals of all nations are melted into a new race of man. . . . I could point out to you a family whose grandfather was an Englishman, whose wife was Dutch, whose son married a French wife, and whose present four sons have now four wives of different nations." In 1776, Tom Paine could truthfully declare that all Europe, and not England alone, was the real "parent country" of America.

The metaphor of "melting pot" coined by Crevecoeur and used by countless writers since that time suggests an extraordinary power of assimilation possessed by the civilization developed in British North America, an assimilative process that has taken a mass of polyglot material and created from it a relatively homogeneous people. From the earliest time, the New World attracted all sorts and kinds of men, some of whom left their impression upon their adopted country. If the melting pot fused them all into something new, nevertheless, these new Americans could not help bearing evidence of their complex origins.

Social historians of late have shown a growing interest in analyzing the various ores that went into the melting pot and of demonstrating that not all of it fused completely. Nevertheless, the metaphor is essentially an accurate one.

But analyses have shown that the percentage of English in the colonial population is not so overwhelming as was formerly believed.

A group such as I am addressing today is interested in family history. Each of you, no doubt, have been able to trace your lineage in many different directions. The objective of this discourse today is to mention briefly the various nationalities contributing to the Colonial Immigration Pattern. These are the ones who emerged as -- AMERICANS. Perhaps you can trace your family history back to one or more of these groups.

We are all familiar with the English groups that came to settle in Virginia, Massachusetts, etc. Therefore, today, I would like to concentrate on the non-English groups that contributed to the colonial society.

The first successful non-British people to establish themselves in what would become one of the original thirteen colonies were the Dutch, who settled New Amsterdam in 1624. Almost symbolical of New York's later development as the greatest port of entry for foreigners was the make-up of the settlers whom the Dutch encouraged to come to New Netherland, for they were a mixed and polyglot people.

Most of the families in the first contingent were French-speaking Walloons, refugee Protestants from the Spanish Netherlands. Though the charter granted the West India Company for the settlement of New Netherland specified that the colonists had to be Protestant Christians, the rule was not strictly observed. One reason was the difficulty of finding emigrants in Holland, for the Dutch were happy at home and felt no compulsion to try their luck in the New World. Since Holland had been hospitable to both political and religious refugees, however, some of these were recruited and went out to seek their fortunes in New Netherland. That section of New York known as "the Bronx" took its name from a Dane, Jonas Bronck, who received a patent to a farm there. A contemporary reported counting eighteen languages spoken in New Amsterdam.

It would be a mistake, however, to assume that foreigners outweighed the Dutch in influence. Actually, the Dutch established their language and characteristics in New Netherlands and only the English were able to infiltrate with sufficient success to supersede them. The Dutch made many cultural contributions. Some were visible and concrete, while others were intangible. Many of these contributions in architecture, language, custom, and folklore are still very evident today.

South of the Hudson River on the Delaware, another group from northern Europe struggled to found a colony, but they were doomed to be absorbed by the Dutch and English. They were the Swedes, who, like the Dutch, had to depend on other people to fill up their quotas of colonists. These were mostly Finns. Though the Swedes and the Finns were few in number, they maintained an independent colony on the Delaware for sixteen years. They established the Lutheran Church in the Delaware Valley, and, what made an even more obvious contribution to the American scene, they introduced the notched-log construction in housebuilding. Thus, to the Swedes, the American frontiersman owed the model of the log cabin that would become the easiest type of house to build in the woods of the West.

The non-British people who exerted the most pervasive influence in proportion to their numbers throughout the North American colonies were the French. Though France was actively at war with Britain through much of the 18th Century, and hostile Frenchmen and their Indian allies were a constant threat to the very existence of the English colonies, French Huguenots and other French refugees were finding a welcome and a home in British America.

In 1685 King Louis XIV revoked the Edit of Nantes, which had given toleration to the French Protestants (known as Huguenots), and reverted to the old policy of religious persecution. In spite of the prohibition of emigration, many of the Huguenots eventually succeeded in escaping to other countries, and a few of them came to America, particularly to Boston, Charleston, and New York. The Huguenots in France had been primarily a middle-class group of merchants and craftsmen, and like all Calvinists they were hardworking, sober, and conscientious.

So industrious, intelligent, and adaptable were the Huguenots as a group that by the second generation many of them occupied places of prominence. They often married into non-French families and were readily assimilated into the dominant society. One of the most notable examples in South Carolina of the rise to prominence of a Huguenot family is to be found in the history of the Manigaults. Other Huguenots were equally successful and contributed immensely to the prosperity and development of South Carolina. Family names like Huger, Gaillard, DeSaussure, Dupre, Guerard, LeGare, IZARD, Laurens, LeConte, Sesesne, and Porcher, all prominent in South Carolina since the colonial period, attest to the place the French immigrants took in the life of the colony. Huguenot names were to be found in nearly every business and profession.

South Carolina in 1755 received another increment of French settlers, in this case suspect and unwelcome, for they were Catholic French peasants being deported from Acadia by the British authorities. More than six thousand Acadians were dumped without notice in various Atlantic ports, and of these approximately 1,200 reached Charleston. Because of the war with France, the Charlestonians regarded the Acadians as enemy aliens, and rumors spread through the town that they were trying to incite a rebellion of the slaves. Homeless and without any means of livelihood, some were sold as indentured servants, while others managed to make their way to Haiti or Louisiana. Few settled permanently in South Carolina.

French Huguenots also settled in Virginia and Pennsylvania. French names also occur in New York from the time of the Dutch onward. A large group of French Huguenots settled in New Rochelle, New York, and they retained certain distinctive characteristics for nearly a century. New Rochelle was famed for the polite manners of its citizens, and its French schools were patronized by New York families who wanted their children to learn not only the French language but polished behavior as well. In short, New Rochelle became fashionable and a resort of the socially prominent or the socially ambitious. In New York City, many families with French names rose to prominence and importance in both business and society.

Among the New York families of French origin were such names as De Lancey, de Forest, Vassar, Gallaudet, and Delano.

French settled in New England also. Among the French names of historical interest in New England are the families of Allaire, Faneuil, Revere, Sigourney, Bowdoin, and DuPuy. As elsewhere, many of the better craftsmen were French. Perhaps the best remembered is Paul Revere, the silversmith and patriot, whose craftsmanship is known to some who never heard of his famous ride. On being shown a statue of Paul Revere in Boston, a silver collector from France is reported to have said, "I suppose it is proper to erect a monument to a silversmith, but why the horse?" (Cited in Carl Bridenbaugh, The Colonial Craftsman, p 87).

In contrast to the small numbers of French, the German immigrants were far more numerous, but they were inclined to keep to themselves, to retain their peculiar characteristics, and to create Germanic communities rather than to assimilate with the other nationals. At the outbreak of the Revolution, it is estimated that Pennsylvania alone had a population of 100,000 Germans, and many thousands more were to be found on the frontiers of Maryland, Virginia, and the Carolinas. They made important contributions to the development of the country, chiefly in agriculture and the handicrafts.

By the outbreak of the Revolution, every British colony had some German settlers, but the heaviest German populations were in Pennsylvania and the colonies adjacent. So concentrated were the Germans in some areas, as in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, and in Frederick County, Maryland, that the German language predominated.

Among the non-British immigrants from Europe who would have a great influence in later periods were a few Jews who arrived in the Colonial Period. Most of them were descendants of the Jews exiled from Spain in 1492, and many of them came from Holland. The first group arrived in New Amsterdam in 1654 and despite some opposition from the Dutch authorities in New Netherland soon made a place for themselves in the business life of the town. By the beginning of the Revolution, there were Jews in all thirteen colonies, though not all colonies made them equally welcome. Georgia, for example, despite its philanthropic origins, was distinctly cool to the Jewish immigrant. Rhode Island, however, with its tolerance for all sects, attracted many Jews, and Newport had a number of important families and became the center of Jewish life in the northern colonies.

The Scots had an immense effect on the cultural development of colonial America. These Scots were of various kinds: Lowland Scots, Highlanders, and Ulster Scots. Interest in the Scots in America had produced a vast and growing literature in which there is much confusion of both fact and terminology, much romance, and not a little nonsense. First of all, the term Scotch-Irish has sometimes led to misunderstanding. Many otherwise well-informed Americans assume that Scotch-Irish means people of mixed Scottish and Irish blood, whereas, historically, it means people of Scottish descent resident in Ireland before their emigration to America.

In many colonial records these people frequently were simply called "Irish", a designation that has misled more than one genealogist. They had little or no Celtic Irish blood in their veins, and almost invariably they were Protestants, and usually Presbyterians. During the whole of the Colonial period, only a handful of Catholic Irish came to America, and at the end of the Revolution Catholics of all nationalities in the new nation numbered hardly more than 24,000. The great influx of true Irish into the United States was a nineteenth century phenomenon.

The Scotch-Irish came from the area of Ulster in Ireland. Before they moved to Ulster they had nearly all come from the Lowlands of Scotland and the Western Isles, and almost invariably they were Presbyterians. After the Jacobite rebellions of 1715 and 1745, many Highlanders also came to America. Like the Ulster Scots, these Highlanders were chiefly Presbyterians. When the Revolution came, the majority of the Highland Scots remained loyal to the King of England. (They were called "Tories").

On the other hand, the Ulster Scots or Scotch-Irish were loyal American patriots. These Scots early demonstrated a love of freedom combined with political acumen. They were frequently agitators for political reform in Pennsylvania. Similarly, Scots in the back country of Virginia, North Carolina, and South Carolina were repeatedly in conflict with the older landed aristocracy. It was not a mere coincidence that Patrick Henry was a back-country politician of Scotch-Irish descent, as were many others who led the fight against George III.

The Scotch-Irish were most influential in the areas of religion and education. The schools, academies, and colleges which they founded in all the areas where Scotch Presbyterians were dominant stand as a monument to their cultural ideas. The College of New Jersey, later Princeton, was their greatest colonial achievement in education; and John Witherspoon, sometime minister of the Presbyterian Church in Paisley, Scotland, was Princeton's most effective president in this period.

Many of us here today owe a great deal to these early American forefathers who came from many parts of the globe.

Let us always take pride in the fact that our ancestors did fuse a new way of life on a new continent. They called themselves, AMERICANS. And they were proud to do so.

May that pride abide with their descendants forever.

Dr. Edmund Lacy gave this talk at our November 15th noon meeting.

BOOK IN REVIEW

THE RESEARCHER'S GUIDE TO AMERICAN GENEALOGY.

Val Greenwood's book with an introduction by Milton Rubincam which was published by the Genealogical Publishing Company in July, 1973 is certainly an authoritative encyclopedia that anyone doing genealogical research should own.

Mr. Greenwood not only touches on most subjects and problems we might encounter, but he also has footnotes as to the sources from which we may get more detailed information.

Some of the subjects that he covers in this, his first book are: Problems and Terminology; Analyzing Pedigrees and Places; Learning to Read Old Style Handwriting; Library Research; Reference Materials; Evaluating Research Findings; Vital Records; Census Returns; Legal Terminology; Wills; Government Land; Court Records; Church Records; Military Records and Canadian Records.

The problem with most books of this type is the readability. This is not the case with this work. He does not dwell on any subject too long where the reader will lose interest, but rather, finds it difficult to put it down.

As a former teacher of Genealogy at Ricks College in Rexford and Brigham Young University, Mr. Greenwood was well aware of the problems that students of Genealogy have had in the past. No doubt the author has experienced all the joys, excitement and frustrations of a researcher.

He has attempted to put in one book all the information that is vital to the student as well as the more seasoned genealogist that could be utilized for reference purposes. He certainly has succeeded!

Due to the scope and diversity of subjects covered, it is amazing that this book took but six years to research and write. More amazing is that you can purchase it from the Genealogical Publishing Company, 521-23 St. Paul Place, Baltimore, Md. 21202 for only $10.00.

As Judge Dee Brown Walker said at a workshop of the Texas State Genealogical Society, "Anyone who can afford to do research and attend a workshop, can't afford not to get this book."

THE PACKWOOD-McCUTCHEM LINE
FROM VIRGINIA TO TEXAS

Contributed by Mrs. Roy L. Rogers, 5722 Winton, Dallas, Texas
(A Descendant)

Samuel Packwood was an early pioneer of Patrick County, Virginia. Records indicate that he was born about 1750. It is not known who his parents were, but a Packwood who was murdered by the Indians in 1770 is believed to have been his father. A full account of the torture and burning at the stake of the earlier Packwood has been related by his great-granddaughter, Jane Packwood Davis (Indiana) in a letter written to Miss Edna Roth. This belief is further strengthened by a letter written by one of the children of Rachel Smith, a daughter of Samuel Packwood, in the year 1802 in which she related that her grandfather was burned at the stake.

The Packwood who suffered this agonizing death was very elderly when Shawnees on the prowl seized and carried him to Chillicothe, Ohio, across the Ohio River. A neighborhood boy by the name of Billy Huff, who had accompanied him, was allowed to live; but Packwood was considered too old and was cruelly tortured three days and nights before he died. The youngster, Billy Huff, escaped when, after the Revolutionary War, the Shawnees took him with them to trade at Marietta, Ohio, the first permanent town on the Ohio River. He managed to reach his home in Virginia and was reunited with his people. Unable to forsake his Indian ways, he later returned to his captors.

The wife of Samuel Packwood was Elizabeth Turner, the daughter of Shadrack Turner (will dated 1783, Henry County, Virginia). Their children are named in a will which was probated at Stuart, Patrick County, Virginia, on the 25th day of July, 1824 (Will Book 1, page 141). This will stated as follows: "Land to be used by wife Elizabeth during her lifetime ---after her death (home land) to Charles Smith . . . other to be sold and divided between children namely: William, Richard, Larkin, Samuel, Rachel Smith, Valentine Gearheart, Nancy Packwood, for children of Sally Bartlet, Edith McCutchen, and Elizabeth Prillaman . . . etc. Daughter Nancy and neighbor Peter Smith, Executors." In Will Book 3, pages 443-4, February 9 and February 11, 1846, and in Will Book 4, page 37, an Inventory and Sales and Payments made of the Estate shows a Benjamin Davis as a Legatee, a Charles Davis and wife Ruth are named, plus others. (Note the name Davis.) This must have been after the death of his wife, Elizabeth.

From hereon is the John McCutchen-Edith Packwood genealogy as developed to date. The marriage bond, Patrick County, Virginia, dated February 10, 1813, lists Samuel Packwood, Parent; George McCutchen, brother of John, as Security and Witness. In the ensuing years the couple, who had three children by 1819, sold their land in Patrick County, Virginia; and by the time they migrated into Franklin County, sometime before 1830, they had seven children. John's brother, George, had preceded them to Franklin County in 1820. Their children show births in three different states -- Patrick County, Virginia; Washington County, Indiana; and Franklin County, Tennessee. Born in Virginia were Elizabeth, 1815; George T., 1816; Rutha, 1817 or 1818; Parmelia, 1819. Born in Indiana was Gordon C., 1821; and in Tennessee, John Packwood, 1828; and Samuel Lafayette, 1833. Parmelia married John Hinton Jones in Tennessee in 1836. John McCutcheon died before 1850 without leaving a will, and the Census for 1850 shows Edith McCutcheon as head of the household.

McCutcheon and second wife was Nancy (Corn) Chitwood of Patrick County, Virginia and Franklin County, Tennessee. Nancy was a widow with two children. George was born in 1791. A Miss Corn has an old Bible with his record.

First of the John and Edith (Packwood) McCutcheon line to come to Texas was Jesse Perkins Miller, son of Robert Jeremiah Miller, and grandson of George Mason Miller. Jesse Perkins Miller was born in Hillsboro, Coffee County, Tennessee, on September 18, 1825. As a young man he served in the Spanish-American War. Later he homesteaded in Chaves County, New Mexico, with his sister, Lura Miller. However, hearing of the oil industry in Louisiana, he departed to that state where he supervised a group of oil drillers.

In 1908, on a visit to Texas, he met and married Edith Kay, who was born April 3, 1881. The couple lived in Louisiana, where their four children were born: Jessie Florence Miller (Mrs. John Phillips, Tyler, Texas); George Edison Miller (m. Lucile Larison), El Paso, Texas; Ruth Elnora Miller (Mrs. Roy L. Rogers), Dallas, Texas; and Bessie Elliot Miller (Mrs. Addison "Mickey" McGuire), San Antonio, Texas. Edith Kay Miller died November 3, 1960. Jesse Perkins Miller died August 11, 1963. They are buried in San Antonio.

Several grandsons of John and Edith (Packwood) McCutcheon also came to Texas, and some of their descendants live in this state today.

LEBANON CEMETERY, HUNT COUNTY, TEXAS.

The Lebanon Cemetery is located about two and one-half miles east of Commerce, Texas.

The land was donated by "Aunt" Becky Little. She deeded three acres to the community for use as a church, school and cemetery in 1870. The church and school were abandoned several years ago. "Aunt" Becky was buried at the cemetery in 1891. The headstones indicate the first person buried at the Lebanon Cemetery was T.C. McClintock who died November 12, 1870.

The cemetery is well kept under the supervision of Mrs. Jessie Roan (Earl) Featherstone and is still used occasionally.

It was reported that about seventy per cent of the graves were those of children and about fifty per cent were not marked. Several years ago the caretaker removed the temporary markers (rocks, etc.) so that the area could be mowed and there is not any evidence where those graves are located.

Mrs. Ewing and I with Mrs. Featherstone listed the headstones on November 10, 1973.

The final resting place of the outlaw, Jesse James, is in Kearney, Missouri, but the original burial place was on the family farm near Kearney; the stone now entirely chipped away by souvenir hunters, was erected by his mother. It read:

"In loving Memory of My Beloved Son - Jess W. James -
Died April 3, 1882 - Aged 34 years, 6 months, 28 days
Murdered by a Traitor and Coward, Whose Name is Not Worthy to Appear Here."

Walnut Grove Cemetery, near Delphos, Ohio:

"Isaac Thurston, died 1914, aged 74"
(log shaped monument)
"He sawed logs for forty years -
But he won't saw this."

Instead of using a Self-Addressed-Stamped-Envelope when writing to distant relatives for information on various members of the family, why not get a permit from the post office and have return business envelopes made. This way, you do not pay for the letters that are not returned and the post office only charges you two cents more than the regular price of postage for using these. In the long run, you will find that the savings can be considerable; besides, you will find that your correspondent is more apt to answer your inquiry handled in this business like manner.

You will also find that it is cheaper in the long run having the envelopes printed in quantity than it costs you buying plain envelopes in smaller quantities.

Your local post office will be more than happy to issue you the permit and give you the particulars of this type service.

Contributed by Dorotha Good Russell:

William Mooneyham came to Texas in 1844 and was issued a Peters Colony Land Grant - Nacogdoches Third Class #2184. He is listed on the 1850 Dallas County Census as Family #394 - a 40 year old farmer having been born in Tennessee. In 1850 he had seven children and came to Texas by way of Missouri.

John Sparkman who married one of William Mooneyham's daughters came to Texas in 1847 with James A. Smith. He settled around the Letot area of Dallas and the Sparkman descendants still own property there - the old Sparkman homeplace is on Lombardy Lane.

One of the allied families with the above families is the Live-ly family who owned Bluff View Dairy. The cemetery is just north of the Dairy.

From time to time, we are asked to recommend speakers to various organizations in Dallas County. We do not, at this time, have too many people that we can recommend for such services.

If you are interested in such function, please advise either the Editor or Program Chairman of your interest and the field in which you feel you would best be qualified to speak (or the area).

Dallas County now has numerous Genealogical, Historical and Patriotic Organizations. At one time or another, they are in need of a speaker for their programs.

You do not have to be a professional genealogist to be knowledgeable in your area of research. By working in a particular state or county, we learn things that could be most beneficial to others.

Remember when you began doing research? If it had not been for certain people taking an interest and helping you, how much longer would it have taken you to make any headway? Return the favor by donating your services in helping others.

Genealogy is generating a great deal of interest right now. LET US TAKE ADVANTAGE OF IT AND PROMOTE IT WHEREVER AND WHENEVER WE CAN.

THINKING OF PUBLISHING ?

Many books can be mimeographed, as this Quarterly is. This is the least expensive way to publish.

B & W Printers have printed the Local History and Genealogical Society Quarterly for many years. We are interested in genealogy and know the care necessary in printing a genealogical book. We will work closely with you to have your book exactly as you want it. We can make excellent reproductions of your pictures.

Call Mrs. Fultz, 941-5553, to discuss your needs. Let her tell you about our new Quick Copying Service.

KNOWLEDGEABLE INTERESTED EXPERIENCED REASONABLE

GENEALOGICAL WORKSHOP sponsored by the Fort Worth Genealogical Society.

Mark your calendar NOW for this workshop on Saturday, April 6, 1974, from 9:00 A.M. to 4:00 P.M., at the Tarrant County Convention Center, 1111 Houston Street, Room 141.

Registration begins at 8:00 A.M. $7.50 fee per person. Subject: RESEARCH IN THE EARLY MISSISSIPPI VALLEY; THE LOUISIANA PURCHASE and MISSOURI and ARKANSAS TERRITORIES.

The speaker will be WINSTON DE VILLE - Fellow of the American Society of Genealogists, lecturer, columnist, publisher, native of Louisiana. Mr. DeVille was formerly Director of Special Collections for Mobile Public Library; Research Consultant to the Louisiana State Department of Archives and Records.

Beginning with the March issue of the Local Historical and Genealogical Society's quarterly, each quarterly will be indexed since many members have expressed that wish. Getting the 1973 index in the December issue, resulted in omitting several articles. These will appear in the March issue. Sorry.

"TEXAS KIN" is the quarterly publication of the Balch Springs Historical and Genealogical Society. Membership $5.00 per year. Single issue to non-members $1.50. President: Mrs. Guy Berry, 2300 Peachtree Road, Mesquite, Texas 75149. Editor: Mrs. Exa Thomas, 301 Oxford Drive, Richardson, Texas 75080.
