DGS Family Search Page

Members of the Dallas Genealogical Society Technology Special Interest Group have created two new pages on the FamilySearch Research Wiki, a collection of more than 40,000 family history articles created by genealogists around the world.

The first page is a society page documenting the Dallas Genealogical Society. The second page provides information about the city of Dallas. The DGS is also the official sponsor for these pages, which allows the organization to have a link to our own web site situated prominently on these pages hosted on a site that is visited by thousands of users from around the world ever day.

The links to the pages are:

https://wiki.familysearch.org/en/Dallas_Genealogical_Society
https://wiki.familysearch.org/en/Dallas_Dallas_County_Texas

Because these pages are Wiki's (which are simply web pages that can be changed by anybody who can view them), anybody can change or add content to them at any time. Help make these pages even more useful by adding your information!

To learn more about Wikis go to the Technology SIG page on the DGS web site:
