In Praise of Blue Highways:
Research along the Genealogical Back Roads
by Jan McFarland *

So, you think you’re ready to leave. You spent months putting aside money and time for this research trip. You asked your neighbor to feed the cat, you finished loading the car with notebooks and files and luggage, your traveling clothes are laid out, and the alarm is set for 5:00 a.m. If you hit the interstate by 5:45 and drive straight through, you can be there by sundown. Day after tomorrow you’ll be in research heaven, steeped in courthouse dust, walking barefoot through ancient records. But enough dreaming. There are 600 miles of interstate to cover tomorrow. It’s time to turn out the lights and get some rest.

Stop right there! Snap on that bedside lamp, fluff up your pillows, and grab a couple of road maps. Getting there, as they say, is half the fun. Properly planned, the road from here to there can be a long and winding gold mine for genealogical research.

Forget about interstates and driving straight through. Take an extra day, take the blue highways, and take your time. What’s a blue highway? Unfold your map. Look at the interstates; they’re the broad, red lines that streak like a gash across the face of the state. Now, look for that little network of thin blue or gray or black lines spider-webbing the big open spaces between the red lines. The broad, straight red lines take you to Stuckey’s, to Howard Johnson’s, and, ultimately, to mind-numbing boredom. The blue highways take you through beautiful countryside, to out-of-the-way museums, and obscure little villages that can give you a feel for the trek your ancestors made from There to Here.

Last year my husband and I took a research trip to Illinois. We prefer to travel the back roads anyway, so I thought the trip would be more interesting by backtracking the route my great-great-grandfather took when he brought his family from Illinois to Texas in 1877. I knew he had passed through Washington, Arkansas, so we made that our first planned stop and stumbled upon Old Washington State Park and the Southwest Arkansas Regional Archives. We expected to stay five minutes, just long enough to stretch our legs, fill the gas tank, and speculate on which trees might have been saplings when James and Lucinda and their children stopped to set up camp for the night. Instead, we spent five hours studying maps, ancestor charts, family Bible records, and unpublished memoirs. By the time we resumed our trip, I had added to my files unpublished ancestor charts on a couple of my family lines, a rare little book on the Southwest Trail, and copies of hand-drawn maps which confirmed the precise route by which James Head had come to Texas 112 years earlier.

In Cord, Arkansas, (an all-but-abandoned village) we stopped for a cold drink and chatted for half an hour with the local postmaster who offered to phone Cord’s resident historian for answers to any questions we might like to ask.

The blue highways led us to other stops in out-of-the-way places; to impromptu conversations with dear people thrilled at the chance to talk about the histories of their home towns. We traveled country roads canopied by ancient trees, through small towns full of beautiful, century-old homes, and past over-all-clad farmers who smiled and waved as we passed by. Every stop for food

Sammie Townsend Lee Newsletter Editor

Editor's Note

You may have noticed the DGS Newsletter has been going through a series of changes in the past few months. We certainly hope you like our new style. In the months ahead, we will continue to bring you interesting how-to articles and informative guides to read, to profile our DGS members and let you know what they are doing, and to keep you up-to-date on DGS and the genealogical happenings in the area and on the national scene.

You, the DGS member, can help! We are soliciting short, timely articles that would be of interest to our readers. If you have discovered a little gold mine of a library or a collection that you are sure would benefit others, tell us about it; we will pass it on. If there is a particular resource in the Genealogy Section that you have used and think should be highlighted in a "Guide," let us know; we will help you "write" it.

We are appreciative of those members who took time to complete the Survey Questionnaire and return it to us. The survey has been very helpful in letting us know what you, the members, want to hear and read.

I want to thank Lea Markoff for sharing her "Bibliography for Jewish Genealogical Research" with us. She originally prepared this bibliography for distribution when Mariam Weiner spoke in Dallas recently and generously offered to share it with the DGS membership.

We know you will enjoy Jan McFarland's article, "In Praise of Blue Highways: Research along the Genealogical Back Roads." The ancestor Jan backtracked was her great-great-grandfather James Franklin Head, a Baptist minister who served many churches in southern Illinois and northern Texas. Beginning in 1872, he kept a ledger in which he listed the marriages, baptisms, and funerals that he organized or served. He kept a personal journal from 27 January 1878 to November 1900 in this ledger detailing day to day life in north Texas. Finally, in the same volume he set down his family record, beginning with his grandfather, giving dates, places, and further information on many family members.

An article, "Excerpts from the Ledger of James Franklin Head," was serialized in The Dallas Quarterly, Volume 36, Number 1 (March 1990), pp 35-40 and Number 2 (June 1990), pp 110-117.
DGS News, Notes, and Reports

By Kelvin Meyers, President

I want to take this space to thank all our members and friends who have made donations to our Special Project for 1990-91. The project, to purchase the 1920 United States Census for the state of Texas, is complete; we are well on our way to having the needed funds for the purchase of the Soundex. Our ultimate goal is to purchase the census for the entire United States.

All donations are greatly appreciated. The cost of each roll is now $23. If you wish your money to be used for a specific state or particular Soundex, specify such and we will try to accommodate. Please be aware that the National Archives will only be sending out complete sets for the entire United States or complete sets of a particular state when the census is officially opened on 2 March 1992, and these orders must be placed by 1 September 1991. Individual rolls will be precessed at a later date. For more information on the project see the last page of this newsletter.

I would like to personally thank June Shipley and Markaleeta Stephenson for graciously volunteering (?) to be the Arrangements Chairmen for the coming year. Also, congratulations to Harry Stephenson, Markaleeta's husband, who was recently elected president of the Lancaster Genealogical Society.

By Art Rubeck, Treasurer

The annual audit of the Society's financial records for the 1989-90 fiscal year has been completed and distributed. The audit finds the statements to fairly present the assets and liabilities of DGS and its revenue collected and expenses paid during the year. The audit was again conducted by Roy McElhaney, a Certified Public Accountant in Garland, without charge to the Society. We wish to express appreciation to Roy for this generous service, and to recommend him to anyone who is need of an accountant.

We would like to thank the Audit Committee, Mary Helen Brengel, Sue Harris, and Joyce Martin Murray, for overseeing the annual audit.

By Linda Rogers, V.P. for Membership

Current DGS membership is 745 members. This total reflects 690 regular members, 35 life members, 20 libraries/societies, and includes 4 new members for the month.

By Bruce Graves, Library Liaison

New in the Genealogy Section at the library is the 1880 U. S. Census Index for Texas in two volumes, A-L and M-Z. Unlike the 1880 Soundex, which only listed families with children ten years of age and under, this index lists all heads of household.

Other new book indexes: 1870 U. S. Census for the states of Virginia and West Virginia, and the cities of Chicago, Long Island, Philadelphia, and St. Louis. These indexes were purchased with DGS gift funds. All census indexes are located on aisle 40.

New in the Tennessee microfilm are three rolls of the Cumberland Presbyterian newspaper, Banner of Peace, miscellaneous issues: 1843-46, 1847-50, and 1851-53. (This acquisition is a donation from Joan Rowland.)

DGS Profile

Meet Patricia Law Hatcher. Pat serves as DGS V.P. for Programs and lectures locally on genealogical topics, computers, and publishing. This past April, her manuscript, Thomas Almond of Virginia and Some Descendants, won the DGS Annual Book Award certificate in the category of best manuscript on a family history or genealogy.

Pat is the compiler of Abstracts of Graves of Revolutionary Patriots. While using the DAR's Annual Reports of burial sites of Revolutionary War patriots located yearly by the Daughters and reported from 1900 to 1974 to the Smithsonian Institution, Pat recognized the need for a comprehensive index. These Annual Reports, which the Dallas Public Library has almost a complete set, are inconsistent from year to year and unindexed. Pat abstracted and compiled the reports into a single alphabetized abstract and privately published them in four volumes, which are also located in the Genealogy Section.

Pat's current project is abstracting and compiling the first three deed books of Barren County, Kentucky, for publication by her company, Pioneer Heritage Press.

Pat's attitude toward genealogy and genealogists is best summed up in the statement that appears on the forms and products she sells at workshops and seminars: "When you search for ancestors, you find friends!" Thank you, Pat, for being a friend to genealogy.
or gasoline became an opportunity for research. By the time we arrived in Illinois, we already had the icing; all that was left was to spend a few days at the courthouse making the cake.

If you don't know what routes your own ancestors took, invest a little time at the library. Study migration routes and trail maps. Search your files for collateral ancestors living between Here and There. See whether any migration trails passed through or nearby the places they lived. They may have begun the trip with your direct ancestor, found a likely-looking spot along the way and settled there. Use your research skills and your intuition. You may be surprised at how accurate your guesses will be.

As you plan your trip, check the maps for indications of historic state parks, battlegrounds, historic homes, and national cemeteries. Stop in at the nearest courthouse or post office and ask if they have a local historical society, or a long-time resident willing to share what he or she knows about the history of the area. Each time you stop for food or other necessities, ask which is the oldest house in town and whether there's a local historical museum or society. More and more towns have set up small museums devoted to local history. Look for them. (Please offer a financial contribution, no matter how small. Donations are vital to the continued existence of these local gems.)

In studying your maps, figure out which rivers your ancestors were most likely to have crossed and check the map for villages with names like Dunn's Ferry or Barnes Crossing or Pine Mill. Inquire about the old ferry, or the bridge, or the mill. Is it still standing? Do the Dunns or the Barneses still have family living nearby? If the person you ask is unable to give you the answers, he or she may know someone who can. A friendly manner and sincere interest in local history, will almost always be rewarded with warmth and hospitality. Who knows, serendipity may lead you to a tombstone or a map or some other fragment of information that helps break a logjam in your research.

Leave the interstates, the truck stops, and the chain restaurants for the truckers and the traveling salesmen. Take the blue highways, and roam the past through which your ancestors traveled.

(If you would like more insight into the pleasures of traveling the back roads, read William Least Heat Moon's classic, BLUE HIGHWAYS: A JOURNEY INTO AMERICA. It is available at the Dallas Public Library in a regular edition (Call No. 917.3 H4378), in large print, and in a sound recording. Or check your bookstore for the paperback, ISBN 0449-211-096.)

Texas/Dallas Collection: History and Archives Division of the Dallas Public Library

The Texas/Dallas History and Archives Division of the Central Dallas Public Library collects and makes available to researchers materials of all formats relating to the history of the City of Dallas and the State of Texas. One of the largest collections of its kind in North Texas, the Texas/Dallas collection is a treasure trove of local and state history. There are valuable historical manuscripts, maps, and documents for the historian and genealogist available in this collection.

Located on the 7th floor of the central library, the collection has more than 40,000 titles and 200 ongoing periodical subscriptions. The microform holdings are extensive, including comprehensive files of The Dallas Morning News, Dallas Times Herald, and many other local and state newspapers. The microform collection has Texas county tax lists, theses and dissertations, the Streeter Collection, Sanborn insurance maps for towns throughout Texas, and many other items on microform.

The Dallas Public Library has been officially designated by the Texas State Library and Archives Commission as the Regional Historical Resource Depository for the County of Dallas. Under this agreement, non-current Dallas County records are deposited in the Texas/Dallas Collection. An archivist is available to assist researchers with government records.
Ellis Island Reopens

After eight years in the planning and four years of massive restoration work at a cost of $156 million, Ellis Island reopened to the public on 10 September 1990 as a museum and shrine to the nearly 12 million immigrants who were processed there from 1892 to 1954. It has been estimated that nearly half of all Americans can trace their immigrant beginnings back to Ellis Island in New York Harbor.

The historic buildings now house a museum filled with more than 2,000 artifacts, 1,500 photographs, and oral histories donated by Americans across the United States. In addition to exhibits, there are two theatres, a library, a children's learning center, and several interactive exhibits.

Museum Highlights

"Through America's Gate" is an exhibit about the immigration process told with photographs, artifacts, personal papers, and soundtracks.

"Ellis Island Galleries" traces the island's history through artifacts and photographs.

The "Treasurers from Home" exhibit contains artifacts contributed by families of immigrants who first stepped on American soil at Ellis Island.

"The Peopling of America" is an electronic map showing population figures for 122 ethnic groups and video interviews of contemporary U. S. immigrants.

The "American Immigrant Wall of Honor" has the names of about 200,000 immigrant families inscribed on it. The 951-foot wall is along the island's east side, and a $100 donation will get your ancestor's name on the Centennial Edition of the wall, scheduled to be completed by 1992. Call (212) 883-1986 for details.

Notice of Closing

The following notice was received from the Pennsylvania State Archives:

Access to archival records will be severely limited during this period...On site research will not be possible, and those persons having business with the Archives will have to do so by scheduling an appointment. Limited mail reference will be available during this period of closure."

The ARKANSAS GAZETTE

In the July-August 1990, issue of the DGS Newsletter the "Guide to Resources in the Dallas Public Library Genealogy Collection" featured the Arkansas Gazette on microfilm and its book indexes. Now comes word of a new publication, The Arkansas Gazette Obituaries Index 1819-1879. This five-year project reflects the work of ten people under the direction of Stephen J. Chism, Head of the Audiovisual Department, University Libraries, Fayetteville, Arkansas. This index includes 14,329 entries for 1819-1879. The index lists every mention of death, whether it appears in an obituary column or in the text of an article on another subject.

Help Us Raise the Texas Flag!

The Dallas Genealogical Society (DGS) 1990-91 Special Project is to raise the funds needed to purchase the 1920 United States Census and Soundex for the State of Texas when it becomes available in March, 1992, to place in the Genealogy Section of the J. Erik Jonson Central Library (Dallas Public Library). An estimated $9,000 is needed, and we have less than one year to raise the money. We have enough funds in the special account to purchase the 1920 Texas Census; we are climbing toward the Soundex. Please help us raise the Texas flag even higher on the flagpole! The current National Archives price per roll is $23, but DGS will accept your tax-deductible gift in any amount.

Gifts can be made to purchase the 1920 Census or Soundex for any state. However, the National Archives will be sending out complete sets for the entire United States or complete sets of a particular state on 2 March 1992, for orders placed by 1 September 1991. Individual rolls will not be processed by the Archives until a later date.

The following DGS members have made very generous donations to the project: Clyde N. Choate; Rubynn T. Darnell for Dent County, MO (in memory of O. Wayne Thompson); Susan W. Laurent for St. James Parish, LA (in memory of Olga Laurent) and the MS Soundex P355 (in memory of Rinaldo Demetris Pittman); J. E. Cox for TX; Jane S. Oliver for NY (in memory of Margaret Stapleton); Nancy H. Mobley for TN.

If you would like to be a part of this project to "Raise the Texas Flag" to the top of the flagpole, send your gift today to:
